'OTHER MAN' WITNESS FOR SOLES

Admits Trysts With Shooting Victim

Today

Says Dollfuss to Hitler.
The Rainbow Advertisement.
Discouraging Drunken Drivers.
About Bonds, Interest, Etc.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

C. A. ARNFAST, editor of the Copenhagen Aarhusposten, had an exclusive piece of news yesterday, written by himself. It told about his suicide, and wound up:

"My old paper thus getting the news of my suicide."

Every editor can have such a beat, once. Mr. Arnfast thought he was of too little use to make life any longer worth while; a mistake. A failure can be useful, as a warning.

DOLLFUSS, of Austria, just now fighting his own hungry workmen with howitzers and the sympathy of France, England and Italy, tells Hitler his Austrians are better Germans than are Hitler's own Germans.

Vienna, according to Dollfuss, is the last stand of Germanic culture. In fact, Austrians, says Dollfuss, are "so naturally German, "that they need not talk about it. Hitler himself is an Austrian, with black hair, no blond Nordic, but probably will not mention that.

GERMAN POETRY was born on the Danube, says Dollfuss. Vienna's Burgtheater was the original home of German drama, and "Stille Nacht," the Christmas carol of all Germans, was written by two Austrians in Vienna, while Germany's national anthem was composed by an Austrian, Joseph Haydn.

Hitler will say:

"All the more proof that Austria is German territory peopled by Germans and should be absorbed by Germany."

It will be absorbed, if Germany wins the next fight.

B. C. FORBES says advertising cuts the cost of doing business, and of course, it does. To sell anything, you must let people know you have it for sale. Advertising does that.

The Lord himself, having promised not to drown the world again, still advertises the fact with his rainbow. It is a truly big advertisement, stretching full width across the sky, a sort of celestial "double truck," and done in colors, to attract more attention.

JUDGE COLLINS, in Miami, sentences a truck driver to thirty years in prison for killing two little boys, driving when he was drunk. The man pleaded guilty to second degree murder. Police said there was no doubt as to his drunkenness.

Judge Collins says:

"The drunken driver is a menace."

Fathers and mothers will agree.

MUSSOLINI SAYS democracy talks itself to death. It is not doing so in this democracy, if it be a democracy. Congress almost needs a sign language.

Prudhomme said:

"Monarchies are destroyed by poverty, republics by wealth."

This republic, for the present, is safe on the wealth side. Nobody is rich any longer, and if wealth should develop anywhere, the tax gatherers would know what to do about that.

COL. FRANK B. SHUTTS says, on his editorial page:

"These civil workers dropped from the payroll will not feel very civil about it."

That puts it mildly. Pouring out a few billions, making jobs everywhere, the government has convinced the unemployed that it "CAN MAKE JOBS" if it will.

Some millions may decide that the government no longer wants to make jobs, and that thought may arouse ugly feeling.

UNTIL THIS new era, men out of work were used to waiting until they found a job and thought that was how Providence had arranged it. Now that the government, wisely and generously, has created jobs, the workers know it can be done, and they may make trouble when it stops, unless natural jobs materialize meanwhile.

A tame lion that has tasted his trainer's blood, and a tame people that has once opened the national pocketbook, may be dangerous.

THERE WAS a funeral, and no one rose, when "a few remarks about the deceased were suggested," so a gentleman, rising slowly, said he thought the occasion might be improved by a few remarks on the single tax, and spoke accordingly.

Without wishing to imitate that single tax gentleman, this writer calls your attention, for the fiftieth time, at least, to one fact.

Six billions spent making jobs, by issuing interest bearing bonds will cost six billions more for interest, doubling the debt.

If the government would print its money, and pay the workers and contractors with that, instead of insisting on paying interest, it would save six billions and have six more billions for EMPLOYMENT.

CONTRACTORS and workers will get only government printed green paper anyhow. They will not get bonds. Why not print the money, put it out, save one hundred per cent of the debt in interest, and stop printing money when you think you have spent enough, just as you would stop printing bonds.

All you get is the government's name, its "promise to pay." The promise to pay means paper, in the end, and the government's promise is as good on green paper as on yellow.

Idiots cry:

"Oh, that would be inflation."

Well, if the government could not pay or redeem the new

WORLD PERIL IN AUSTRIAN CRISIS

Knickerbocker Says Intervention Means War

Surrounded by troops of other nations ready to move at a moment's notice, Austria "again is a first rank international worry of the western world," H. R. LINDY DEALS IN AIR STOCK PROBED

Million Paper Profit In Pan American Line Reported

By PAUL C. YATES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Data showing that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had a paper profit of $1,330,000 out of stock option warrants given to him by Pan American Airways, the only company exempted from Postmaster General Farley's blanket order canceling air mail contracts, was assembled today by the Black (Senate) Committee.

The Pan American bounty was entirely separate from a $250,000 stock gift made to Lindbergh by Transcontinental Air Transport.

The Pan-American stock options included 10,000 shares redeemable at $15 per share and an equal amount redeemable at $30 per share, the committee has been informed.

The stock reached a peak of $89 in 1929. At this figure, Lindbergh's gross profit would have amounted to $1,780,000. After paying the $450,000 required to exercise the options, he could have netted the tidy sum of $1,330,000 without the risk of a penny.

STOCK PRICE FALLS

When Pan-American stock hit its all-time low of 11½ in 1931, the Colonel still had a large amount, as represented by these options, in his possession, acording to evidence the committee has gathered.

The stock recently has ranged in the neighborhood of $40 per share.

As technical adviser to TAT and also to Pan American, Lind-

Soles Case Mystery Letter

The mystery letter received at the Soles home a few days before the fatal shooting of LaRoux and which, it is contended by the defense, was the cause of the entire household being upset, was introduced into evidence by handsome Bob Soles' attorneys today.

William Sibley Martin, of Teaneck, N. J., admitted writing the letter when called as a defense witness. He admitted signing it to indicate that it was from a woman.

The letter, read to the jury by Attorney O. K. Eaton, follows:

"Dear Mrs. Soles:

"You will recall that we were patients at the same hospital and met constantly in the doctor's office. At one time you informed me you would help me a little if I needed help. At that time I didn't, but now I must go to the hospital as rheumatism has set in and I can only be cured at the hospital.

"You must know I am desperate or I wouldn't write you but I went over to see if you'd loan me the money necessary before they will take me. I found you had gone home but felt so sure you'd help, I obtained your address. I only need $40 to go in on and yet cannot raise a dollar.

"Our friends would help but can't and as you know the suffering I was going through when you were here—I feel you will not refuse to aid me after saying you would. I know that you must be glad to be well again and if I could avoid bringing this up I'd be glad, but I am going to be worse unless I take the treatment and I can't be admitted without the amount I mention.

Will you help me and at once and I will repay you when I get to work. I simply can't work now and am in pain all the time.

"I hope you will do this and I will be forever grateful."

The letter was signed, "Sincerely, Mrs. William Sibley," and a postscript said:

"General Delivery, as we will move when I go to the hospital."

The 'Other Man' in the Soles Case

WILLIAM SIBLEY MARTIN
Mr. Martin, Teaneck, N. J., the realtor who today in the Soles trial went on the stand and told of his acquaintance with Mrs. Soles in Florida—where, in the words of defense counsel, Mrs. Soles had an unfortunate experience with a man. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

IDENTIFIES 'MYSTERY' LETTER SENT WOMAN ASKING FOR AID

Out of the glorious past of a Miami vacation came the gaunt reality of the "other man" into the life of attractive LaRoux Soles to rally to the defense her husband, Handsome Bob, on trial for his life in connection with her death, in Criminal Court today.

That "other man"—the write of the mystery letter which bobbed up so unexpectedly the other day— is William Sibley Martin, a real estate operator of Teaneck, N. J., by his own admission from the witness stand.

Quietly resigned to an unpleasant task—distasteful, too, perhaps—he strode to the stand, the first witness to be called by Attorney O. K. Eaton, counsel for Soles. Handsome, in a way; tall and well knit, he appeared to be a man of perhaps 40—well dressed and well spoken.

TELLS OF MEETING

He spoke seriously and distinctly in answer to question put to him by Attorney Eaton.

He told of meeting LaRoux at the beach in Miami during the latter part of January, last year. He told of meeting her father, H. B. Lynch, and her brother, John Lynch, and testified he had been in the Lynch home in Florida on various occasions.

He told, too, in a rather subdued voice, how he and LaRoux had made frequent trips to a doctor's office in Miami—a Dr. Lowe.

Eaton asked:

"Were you and Mrs. Soles together in Dr. Lowe's office more than once?"

He answered:

"Yes, possiblye 30 times."

When the letter—the mystery note—was produced, he testified that he had written it and testified also to making a telephone call a few days later to the Soles home in McKeesport.

HITCH-HIKED HOME

Mrs. Soles answered that call, he testified. A man's voice came on next, he continued, and told him:

"If you ever try to get in touch with my wife or write to her again, I'll have you arrested."

Under cross examination he insisted he had written the letter asking Mrs. Soles for money for hospital treatment and had used the name, "Mrs. William Sibley," because he didn't want anyone to "know it was me."

He was broke, he testified, and was in urgent need of the hospital treatment. Prosecutor Haggerty thundered:

"Here, you're down in Miami for five months and you haven't enough money to pay a telephone call. How did you get home from Miami?

The witness replied:

"I hitch-hiked."

PUSHES SUICIDE CLAIM

If Soles was not mentally off balance then, he certainly was when he signed the confession in the District Attorney's office four months after LaRoux was buried. Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, the

CRASH INJURES 10 AFTER PARTY

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 17.—Seven youths and three girls, all of this city, were injured this morning when two automobiles crashed head-on about 12 miles from here.

One youth, Edward Rankin, 21, was rushed to a Washington hospital where an emergency operation was performed immediately in an attempt to save his life. Physicians reported his condition was critical as the result of a fractured skul. Eight other occupants of the two machines were confined to the hospital with injuries, but none was said to be in a serious condition.

Members of the state highway patrol investigated the crash which cast gloom over a night of merrymaking but have not made a report.

In addition to Rankin, those confined to the hospital were:

Miss Jerry Maurer, 18, back injury; Miss Hope Seibert, 24, possible cracked jaw; Miss Lou Rowe, 22, possible fractured left shoulder; John Reynolds, 22, not serious; James McKee, 23, not serious; George Hopkins, 24, cuts about the head; Philip Rossetti, 26, not serious; George Lowther, 27, not serious.

Russell Miller, 25, was not detained at the hospital.

Film Actress Sues Doctor for Divorce

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 17.—(INS.)—Dr. Frank Nolan today denied charges made by his wife, Eleanor Hunt, film actress, in her suit for divorce. She charged he was cruel, argumentative and spoke disparagingly of her in the presence of others.

A few days ago Miss Hunt had insisted that all was "lovey-dovey" in her marriage with Dr. Nolan, despite rumors that they had separated. She filed suit yesterday.

RYAN BATTLES UNION CHIEF

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 17.—Marty Ryan, stormy petrel of the war-torn Fayette County coal field, today accepted the challenge of William Hynes, president of District No. 4, United Mine Workers, to expose the recent international union meeting at Indianapolis.

When the district convention opened in Fraternal Home building, today, Ryan and his delegation occupied seats in the rear of the hall.

He remained quiet while President Hynes presided at the opening. About 175 delegates were in attendance.

There was no opposition from the insurgent faction as Hynes declared all would be given a square deal. Hynes also said:

"We will listen to what all have to say."

Hynes praised the conduct of the local delegation at the Indianapolis convention and said he anticipates Congress will amend the Industrial Recovery Act.

Ryan, head of the Grindstone local, had challenged the leadership of Hynes and the latter had dared Ryan to attend the meeting.

The question of Ryan's attendance, in view of the fact that he was said to lack credentials, was expected to be aired later.

Water Supply Cut By Cold at Kane

KANE, Pa., Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Dozens of "bucket brigades" pass back and forth before fire hydrants, the only sources of water supply for hundreds of families since the prolonged cold wave disrupted water systems throughout this section.

The below-zero weather that has continued almost unbroken for two weeks has frozen domestic lines by the hundred. Damage from the cold mounts daily,

3 ARMY FLIERS DIE IN CRASHES

International News Service.

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 17.—Three United States Army fliers were dead today in the first challenge hurled by the elements at the federal government's venture of carrying the mails over the dangerous mountainous areas of the West.

Two officers were killed as they crashed during a blinding snowstorm in Weber Canyon about 60 miles east of Salt Lake, and another perished in a burning ship six miles southeast of Jerome, Idaho, last night, while rain was falling and visibility poor.

The men were all second lieutenants in the Army Air Corps Reserve and were engaged in trial runs preparatory to flying the mails Monday morning.

The dead:

Greiner, Second Lieut. Jean D., Third Attack Group, Fort Crockett, Galveston, Tex.

White, Second Lieut. Edwin D., Ninety-fifth Pursuit Squadron, March Field, Riverside, Cal.

Eastman, Second Lieut. James Y., Seventh Bombardment Group, March Field, Riverside, whose plane burned.

Widow of 'T. R.' Ill With Severe Cold

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the late President, is confined to her home with a severe cold.

Schwab, 72, 'Cutting' Business for Bridge

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, 72 years old tomorrow, is spending less time at business and more at the bridge table.

Although he still finds the chairmanship of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation "the one thing I have that holds the greatest interest in life for me," he is "lightening" his load. The veteran steel man said:

"I am not giving much time to business any more, and am spending only several hours a day at my office.

"I am finding quiet and relaxation at my various clubs and in playing cards."

Commenting on the NRA, the manufacturer said:

"With all my interests I heartily co-operate with the President in everything that he wants to do in a vigorous and constructive manner."

He has never lost the feeling "during this period of temporary depression" that "ultimately this country will have happy and prosperous days as before."

Schwab said he would observe his birthday quietly at home with Mrs. Schwab.

City Zoning Law Attack Dropped Despite McNair

Pittsburgh's zoning laws remain intact today despite Mayor William N. McNair's advice to "forget" them.

Thomas J. Trimble, of 35 Semicir street, whose application for a building permit exception prompted the Mayor's assault on the laws last Tuesday, today withdrew his application before the Board of Adjustment. But not before vigorous defense of the zoning ordinance was voiced by J. Smith Christy, representing the Civic Club; George O. Rogers, an architect, and Martin C. RIVAL IS FIRST WITNESS CALLED BY SOLES DEFENSE

ADMITS TRYSTS WITH VICTIM OF SHOOTING

Jury Hears Story of Trysts in Florida, Call for Help

prosperous McKeesporter's counsel, indicated as the defense opened late yesterday.

Eaton promised the jury of six women and six men that he would show that the death of LaRoux Soles was "a plain case of suicide."

The death of her two children, an affair with another man, her ill health—these were factors which moved the unclad and attractive LaRoux to take her own life with her husband's Army pistol one night last June, Eaton contended.

Prosecutor Jack Haggerty rested the state's case yesterday after District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Soles' confession in hand, and Rose Hardy, Soles' blonde friend, had taken the stand.

ADMITS FRIENDSHIP

Rose Hardy made no secret of her friendship with Soles—a friendship which became close six months before LaRoux was shot. Stylishly garbed, she was unruffled and concise in giving her testimony. She was called as a witness against Soles, but her heart and her sympathy appeared crying out for his freedom.

Eaton was quite frank in his 20-minute opening argument to the jury:

"We propose to show you this is a plain case of suicide.

"Mrs. Soles had a great deal of trouble. She was greatly distressed about her condition—her physical condition, if not mental. We propose to show you she was a psychoneurotic.

"We will show you that in Florida incidents commenced which crushed her spirits finally. There she had an unfortunate experience with a man. We will show you they made frequent visits together to the office of a certain doctor.

"This condition necessitated her getting some money from her husband and that money was used to care both for herself and the man.

CONFESSES TO HUSBAND

"Finally, they came North. After she had been in her home about two weeks there was delivered to her home a letter, signed as coming from a woman, but in fact written by the man.

"This letter was opened and lying on the table where Mr. Lynch was sitting. His daughter lay on the floor crying. The husband came in and carried her into her bedroom, where she explained to him what the letter meant and what was back of it.

"The defendant forgave his wife and planned, as she requested, to go to Europe.

"Two or three days after the receipt of this letter the man called the home from Florida and talked both with Mrs. Soles and Mr. Soles.

"After Mrs. Soles made up her mind not to go to Europe, they went to Atlantic City. There he devoted himself to her and particularly to the idea of getting suicide out of her mind.

"We will show you by the facts that the testimony by Mr. Lynch (LaRoux's father) here is not correct. We will show you that another person was in that house talking to Mr. and Mrs. Soles that night and while in the bedroom—the three of them, Mr. and Mrs. Soles and another woman—the defendant's guns were brought out and Mrs. Soles took the smaller gun in her hand and looked at it in a most significant way.

DRINKING ADMITTED

"We will show you that he did go out later that night and on coming home found his wife on the bed. He thought she still suffered from that stomach condition.

"It's true that the defendant had had some drinks of whisky that evening.

"It's true that he went down to the hospital in that condition.

"Mrs. Soles made that declaration, that Bob didn't do it, to others.

"We will show you by the corset, or girdle which was cut off, and by her undergarments and the body itself that the gun must have been fired by her.

"The note could not have been written by her after the shot was fired.

"We will show you that the defendant made a long search for the man his wife had become involved with, but he did not know his name until yesterday—we, his attorneys, did not tell him we had made an investigation and had learned the name, because he became nervous, depressed and melancholy. That condition continued until after he was put in jail.

"We will show you that he is a man of standing and reputation in the community of McKeesport, where he has lived.

"We will show you that the terrible physical condition of his wife so preyed on her mind so much that she was afraid to go out among others."

Weather Conditions.

Two highs, one over the eastern states and central over the Lower St. Lawrence Valley (Montreal, 30.60), and the other over the Canadian Northwest (Edmonton, Alberta, 30.52), are separated by a trough of low pressure central over Colorado (Pueblo, 29.68), and extending in a trough from Manitoba to New Mexico. Light rain or snow has fallen along the Atlantic coast, in Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan, the Central Rocky Mountains and portions of the plateau and Middle Pacific Coast. Rain continues in Western Kansas, Colorado, Southern Wyoming and Northern Utah this morning. It is colder in the eastern states and Northern Alberta and Saskatchewan and warmer in the northern lake region, the westedn plains and Rocky Mountains.

River Conditions.

There was little change in the river conditions since yesterday morning. Stage at Franklin is 5.5 feet; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 12.2; Pittsburgh, 10.7; Dam No. 4, 3.6; No. 6, 4.3; No. 10, 4.0, and No. 12, 5.2. The dams are down.

TROLLEY CRASH INJURES TWO

Two women were in hospitals today with injuries suffered when an outbound Carrick street car on which they were riding collided with a truck loaded with state-owned liquor at Second avenue and Try street, late yesterday.

Mrs. Ida Stump, 68, of Josephine street, suffering internal injuries and severe bruises, is in St. Joseph's Hospital. Mrs. Regina Graham, 24, of 33 Cedricton street also bruised, is in Mercy Hospital. R. M. Buck, 38, the motorman, of 311 Richfield street, suffered lacerations of the finger.

Buck and Henry Bohn, 26, of 660 Mansfield avenue, driver of the truck, were arrested and later released on $1,000 bond each. The truck, owned by the Pennsylvania Transfer Company, was en route to the state liquor store at Mt. Pleasant.

CWA Plans Work Here Until May 1

Allegheny County's share in the new CWA program, which will prolong work here until May will be announced next week, James L. Stuart, county administrator, said today. More than 100 additional and supplementary projects have been approved by Stuart's office for submission to State Administrator Eric H. Biddle when the new fund is ready, he said.

The fund, amounting to $450,000,000, was approved by President Roosevelt this week.

ROOSEVELT O. K. GIVEN MOOTED CODES

Restaurant, Laundry Pacts Approved Conditionally

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt has given conditional approval to two of NRA'S most difficult as well as far-reaching codes, covering the laundry industry and restaurant trade, both noted for low wages and long work hours.

With them Hugh S. Johnson put into effect a third pact, for the slip-cover manufacturing industry, bringing the total of codes to 283.

CODE PROVISIONS

The restaurant code, effective February 26, establishes a six-day work week, with a maximum of 54 hours for male help and 48 for women, but with definite provision that wherever the hours have been shorter they shall not be increased to the code level. Wages were established on two scales, non-service employes getting $12 to $15, according to the population of the community, and service help $9.50 to $10.50, with all tips to be kept by the waiters.

The laundry code, as a whole was given only a 90-day conditional approval, for a further report on wages, and subject to special stipulations. It establishes a 14-cent wage in the South, approved with reluctance by the President and Johnson, ranging up to a 30-cent minimum in cities of more than 600,000 population in the Northeast and Far West.

Laundry work hours were fixed at 40 a week, NRA estimating that they have averaged 45.

The restaurant code provided that employers should not make reductions for meals except by agreement with their help and then not more than $3 a week.

Buyers 'Ganged,' Critic Of NRA Tells Voters

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—(Universal.)—Price fixing has flourished through open price associations permitted in NRA codes, and the buyer has been "ganged," Leon Henderson, assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, declared in an address last night.

Henderson, an outspoken critic of NRA, was recently invited by Gen. Johnson to serve as an assistant and make a first-hand study of the recovery administration in the interest of consumers. He spoke before the League of Women Voters.

SNYDER SEEKS STATE OFFICE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—State Senator Henry L. Snyder has announced his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor, leaving United States Senate aspirations to Roland S. Morris, former state chairman and ambassador to Japan, as Democrats who oppose the organization slate meet in Harrisburg today.

Coming to the capital to discuss a ticket of their own, the anti-Guffey Democrats faced a fight for the top place until the Lehigh legislator's announcement at Sunbury last night. Leaders in the movement tentatively had chosen Snyder to run for the nomination to the United States Senate when Morris, a Philadelphian, announced his hat was in the ring.

Snyder now is listed for the position on the ballot tentatively assigned to State Representative Norbet J. Fitzgerald, of Erie.

bergh today is a figure in the controversy raging around the air mail investigation and Farley's cancellation order.

Transcontinental and Western Air has thrust the colonel into the breach as a knight errant in its fight to regain the mail subsidy on the middle transcontinental route from New York to the West Coast.

Pan American, in the meantime, has suffered no impairment of contractual relations with the government. It is carrying on its work of flying mail and passengers through the high passes of Mexico, the Central American jungles, the Caribbean, the needle pointed peaks of the Andes, Alaska and China.

Foreign Air Mail Contracts Under Fire in Probe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Victorious against the first legal challenge of its right to annul domestic air mail contracts, the administration today pried into foreign air mail agreements.

There were indications that disputes over the government's contract abrogation might continue for weeks, or longer.

Following dismissal by a New York Federal Court, on grounds of no jurisdiction, of an action by Transcontinental and Western Air to restrain the cancellation, counsel for the company said he would at once appeal.

Another major chapter in the controversy was looked for on Monday, Walter F. Brown, former Postmaster General, will appear before the Senate air mail investigation committee.

Chairman Black, of the committee, last night stated publicly that the 1930 meetings of air mail representatives here, which Brown contends represented no collusion, resulted on contract allocations that were contrary to law.

Upon investigations now in progress, Postoffice officials said, will depend whether foreign air mail contracts are canceled or retained.

Hawks Makes Plea To Save Air Industry

SEATTLE, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Commander Frank Hawks, speed flier, commenting today on the air mail investigation, said "Punish the bad boys, but don't jeopardize a fine, growing industry which offers the nation such a service and defense."

Hawks will sail for China tomorrow to demonstrate an American-built bombing plane.

TENEMENT FIRE KILLS 7

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Seven persons, including two children, perished in a fire that swept a five-story tenement house on the lower East Side early today.

Starting in the basement, the blaze spread rapidly through the brick building, breaking through the roof.

Firemen rescued many others by climbing ice-covered ladders. Some tenants groped their way through the smoke to fire escapes and made their way to safety.

The flames, shooting from windows and through the roof, attracted a large crowd.

Windows Smashed By Hotel Strikers

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(INS.)—Glaziers were busy today repairing more smashed windows as a result of violence in the waiters' strike. Three mid-town hotels were victimized last night as 500 strikers paraded.

The Park Central, the St. Moritz and the Astor were the hotels attacked, the strikers using slingshots with metal slugs.

money, it certainly could not redeem the bonds, with one hundred per cent added for total interest charges.

If printing interest - free money would be inflation, what do you call printing billions of bonds, plus 100 per cent for interest.

THE POOR man should know, and here he is told, that twice as much could be spent to give him work, without extra cost, if the interest-bearing bond-issuing stupidity could be cut out.

The rich man is reminded that all this unnecessary interest, which will soon run into billions a year, will come out of his pocket, killing industrial enterprise and national prosperity.

Some say:

"If they once started PRINTING money, they would never stop."

Who is "they?" Would President Roosevelt, Morgenthau, Congress "never stop printing money?" Are they idiots?

And if they would never stop printing money, why should they ever stop printing bonds? Bonds are as easy to print as money, and the government itself provides the money to buy them.

The banker bids for bonds, pays only five per cent on the amount bought, and can borrow the total amount of his purchase, on the bonds, at the Federal Reserve Bank, which takes his bonds as collateral, hands him new green money.

If government can print money to help bankers buy bonds, why, in the name of common sense, can it not print the money to pay workers and contractors, the kind of money they get in the end, anyhow, namely, fiat money, on any gold, silver or other than an imaginary basis?

ASK YOUR congressman about that, and your banker. The latter will tell you that he does not put his, or the bank's money, into these bonds, if he is a truthful banker.

This country, for lack of courage to try a new plan, and for lack of confidence in itself, is about to throw away billions in needless interest charges.

And that may lead to calamity, otherwise avoidable.

CITY ZONE LAW ATTACK ENDS

ens Mihm, of 45 Semicir street, who opposed the permit.

TRIMBLE 'SORRY'

Trimble said he was "sorry I have caused all this trobule," explaining:

"My daughter (Miss Margaret Trimble) came before your board without my knowing it."

When Miss Trimble was refused a permit for her father to build a garage 17 feet back from the street, while the zoning ordinance stipulates 60 feet, she went to the Mayor. He then represented her before the Board of Adjustment. She said she had been promised a new car by her father if she could get the permit.

BACK ZONING LAWS

Rogers said:

"If you dispense with the zoning laws, you might as well do away with the police and all other protection to the property owners."

Christy declared:

"We must defend the zoning laws."

And Attorney Mihm said:

"The city must protect the value of property from such threatened attacks. If this withdrawal insures that protection, we are perfectly satisfied."

Holdup Men Beat And Rob Pedestrian

En route to visit a married sister in Lawrenceville, Edmond A. Shudneski, 25, West Natrona, was attacked by two men last night and later taken by police to St. Francis Hospital, where a second sister, Helen Skudneski, day supervisor at the hospital, was called to his bedside.

Skudneski was robbed of a diamond ring and wrist watch.

FOUR OFFICERS UNDER CHARGE OF MURDER

Troopers, Constables Accused in Hoax Holdup Killing

Two state policemen and two constables today stood charged with murder in the "framed" barbecue holdup that ended in the shooting to death of one youth and the wounding of another Wednesday night.

Murder charges were preferred against them by Coroner W. J. McGregor after a conference yesterday between District Attorney Andrew T. Park and his assistant, George F. P. Langfitt. Pvt. Charles E. Mullen, said by county detectives to have fired the shot that penetrated the heart of John Cotton, 21, of Curtisville, was released in the custody of his superiors by Coroner McGregor. Pvt. H. E. Stinnett was released on $5,000 bond posted last night. The constables, Irvey Asay, of East Deer Township, and William Brozek, of Indiana Township, were committed to jail in default of $5,000 bond each.

ONE OFFICER RELEASED

Mullen was released without security when it was pointed out that he was not present when the "holdup" was said to have been planned in Asay's home. McGregor refused to release the other three because they were said to have admitted arranging the hoax to trap Cotton, whom they suspected of holdups. Sitting in on the meeting was Milton Eckler, 20, of Culmerville, who agreed to lead Cotton into the police trap.

Eckler was shot in the chest when M. A. Sallade, proprietor of the barbecue at Harts Run road and KDKA boulevard, Indiana Township, opened fire, after Cotton fell dead with the bullet in his heart, the sleuths said. The inquest will be held when Eckle, in St. Francis Hospital, recovers. He will be the state's star witness. Eckler told county detectives that the shots were fired without cause and in violation of the agreement with the officers.

SHOOTING RE-ENACTED

Accompanied by Sallade, County Detectives Frank Ritz and John Duderstadt went to the barbecue and re-enacted the fatal shooting.

Cotton's death came on the eve of his birthday. Unaware of the tragedy, his mother, Mrs. Mary Cotton, was preparing a birthday dinner for him when neighbors showed her newspaper accounts of her son's death a day after it occurred. The mother verifieed the story that Eckler had come to her home and induced her son to accompany him on the night of the fatal shooting.

PINCHOT LABOR AIDE QUITS

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 17.—Apparently because of differences with Gov. Gifford Pinchot over labor policies, Stephen Raushenbush, formerly head of the state's Industrial Relations Bureau and more recently a labor investigator for the Governor, has resigned, it was announced today.

Charlotte Carr, state Secretary of Labor and Industry, said Raushenbush will be succeeded by Clarence Moser, of Allentown, organizer for the Central Labor Union there and a member of Gov. Pinchot's sweatshop investigating commission.

Moser will become the first head of the bureau of mediation of the Department of Labor and Industry. The industrial relations bureau, of which Raushenbush was head, was occupied with mediation duties, but was abolished after the 1932 special session of the Legislature prohibited use of state funds for mediation work.

Raushenbush was then transferred to the Governor's payroll.

Hotel Strikers Charge 54-Hour Law Violation

Charges by women workers of the William Penn Hotel that they were forced to work more than 54 hours a week have been forwarded to the Labor Department in Harrisburg, it was announced today.

The charges were made by striking hotel workers at a meeting of the Council for Peace and Social Action at Moose Temple yesterday afternoon. The meeting was arranged by the council to give the strikers and the hotel management a chance to present their sides of the strike.

A dozen of the strikers complained of working conditions. Several women said they had been forced to work longer than the time set by law. One chambermaid said that after she had been forced to punch the time clock to show that she had stopped work in accordance with law, she had been ordered to do more work. She said the hotel management told her:

"The government is after us, so you have to punch the clock at 4 p. m. everyday."

No representative of the hotel spoke at the meeting. Later F. L. Andrews, manager of the William Penn, denied any violation of the women's maximum working hours.

Rabbi B. B. Glazer, chairman of the meeting, promised he would aid the strikers. He urged them to present a counter-petition to NRA officials in answer to the exemption petition of the William Penn.

McFadden Called Liar By Henry L. Doherty

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Representative Louis T. McFadden has called Henry L. Doherty a name—and vice versa.

To the Pennsylvania Republican's charge of "tax-evader," hurled yesterday in the House, the utilities man was on record today with a reply. It was:

"Liar."

Doherty, in New York, added that McFadden was untruthful, too, in intimating that the Roosevelt administration is protecting him and in saying that Cities Service Company, the Doherty concern, is "one of the biggest tax evaders in the nation."

Doherty said this was "not only a libel upon me and my companies," but also "a baseless and vicious attack on many honest public official and on the administration itself." McFadden had said:

"Instead of the administration protecting this man notwithstanding the fact that he is making every effort to prevent proper investigation, his company's income taxes should be looked into."

The Pennsylvanian, who tried to impeach former President Hoover, asserted Doherty was one of the largest contributors to President Roosevelt's campaign fund and that the present head of the Treasury tax division is a friend of the New Yorker. He added he was "told" that Arthur Mullen was handling Doherty's income taxes.

Mullen, Washington attorney and Democratic national committeeman for Nebraska, said:

"I have never had any connection with any tax matters for H. L. Doherty or for the Cities Service Company."

'OTHER MAN' TELLS OF FRIENDSHIP WITH MRS. SOLES

MET ON BEACH IN FLORIDA, JURY TOLD

Witness Admits Visits To Doctor's Office With Woman

The "other man" paved the way for the defense of Robert Smith Soles today in Criminal Court where the McKeesport real estate dealer is on trial charged with the murder of his wife. William Sibley Martin, of Teaneck, N. J., was the first witness called. Attorney O. K. Eaton conducted the examination.

Q.—Did you meet, or know LaRoux Soles in January or February, 1933. When did you first meet her?

A.—The latter part of January.

Q.—Where?

A.—At the beach.

Eaton showed the witness two photographs—one a portrait of LaRoux and a snapshop of a group. He identified the portrait as a likeness of Mrs. Soles and in the group picked out H. B. Lynch, LaRoux's father.

Q.—Did you know H. B. Lynch in Florida?

A.—Yes.

PICKS OUT FATHER

The witness then picked out Mr. Lnch in the crowded courtroom.

Q.—How many times did you meet him down there?

A.—About a dozen times.

Q.—Mr. Martin, I wish you'd state whether or not you and LaRoux Souls ever went together to a doctor's office in Miami, Fla.

A.We were.

Q.—When were you first together in a doctor's office?

A.—The first part of February.

Q.—What doctor's office?

A.—Dr. Lowe.

Eaton asked Dr. Lowe to stand up and the witness identified him.

Q.—Were you and Mrs. Soles together in Dr. Lowe's office more than once?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How many times altogether?

A.—Possibly 30.

Q.—When was the last time you were together in the doctor's office?

A.—The middle of April.

ADMITS HANDWRITING

Q.—I show you now an envelope (the mystery letter). Whose handwriting is on it?

A.—Mine.

Q.—I show you now the contents of that envelope. Whose handwriting is this?

A.—Mine.

Q.—I ask you to look particularly at the signature, Mrs. William Sibley. Whose handwriting is that?

A.—Mine.

Q.—I ask you, Mr. Martin, where was this letter written?

A.—Miami.

Q.—After it was written, what was done with it?

A.—I mailed it.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with Mrs. LaRoux Soles within a few days after the letter was written and mailed?

A.—I did.

Q.—When was that?

A.—The latter part of April.

Q.—By what means did you have that conversation?

A.—Long distance telephone.

Q.—Where were you?

A.—In the telephone office at Miami.

TALKED WITH BROTHER

The witness then explained he put through a long distance call from the telephone office to the residence of Mrs. LaRoux Soles in McKeesport.

Q.—Mr. Martin, did you know any other relative of LaRoux Soles besides her father?

A.—Her brother, John.

Q.—How many times did you see or talk with her brother, John?

A.—Many.

Q.—Had you ever been in his home?

A.—Yes.

Q.—When you put in the call from Miami, did you use any other name other than your own?

A.—Yes, John Lynch.

Q.—What voice answered?

A.—A woman's voice.

Q.—Whose was it?

A.—LaRoux Soles.

Q.—What conversation did you have with her?

A.—I asked her if she received my letter and she said she did.

Q.—What happened then?

A.—A man's voice came on.

Q.—What conservation did you have with the man.

TELLS OF THREAT

A.—The man asked me, "Who do you want to talk to?" and I told him, "Mrs. Soles." He said: "If you ever try to get in touch with my wife or write to her again, I'll have you arrested." I told him, "Perhaps I'll stop by in McKeesport on my way home" and he said, "If you do, I'll have you arrested."

At this point, Eaton offered the letter in evidence and asked permission of the court to read it to the jury. Haggerty objected, but was overruled. The letter was read.

Q.—Why did you use the name Mrs. William Sibley, Mr. Martin?

A.—So no one else would know it was me.

Haggerty took the witness for cross-examination.

Questioning brought out that Martin, a married man with a family, lived in Teaneck, N. J., and that he was in the real estate business. He was on a vacation in Florida when he met Mrs. Soles. His wife was not with him.

Haggerty, flourishing pencil and paper, demanded:

"Here, Mr. Martin—Write the name 'Mrs. LaIoux Soles, McKeesport, Pa.,' and 'Mrs. William Sibley' on this paper."

The witness complied.

Q.—Did you ever write to Mrs. Soles before?

A.—No.

Q.—You never wrote to her before, yet you sign your name Mrs. William Sibley. Do you mean to tell me you thought she'd know who that was?

The witness did not answer. Haggerty thundered:

"Is that right?"

The witness shrugged and replied:

"That's right."

Q.—Do you mean to tell us, you, a man, expected to go to the postoffice and ask for a letter for a woman?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you?

A.—Yes. There was none.

Q.—How many efforts did you make to get an answer to this letter?

A.—About half a dozen.

Q.—You testified that a few days after you wrote this letter you called up to find out whether she got the letter. Why? The letter probably hadn't got there yet. What was your purpose in calling up?

A.—To determine why she hadin't replied to the letter.

Q.—Did you pay for the telephone call?

A.—I reversed it.

Q.—Here you're down in Miami for five months and you haven't got enough money to pay a telephone bill. How did you get homef rom Miami?

A.—I hitch-hiked.

District Attorney Park and blonde Rose Hardy, who had an apartment over Bob Soles' office in McKeesport—these were the witnesses who held the attention of the jury when court adjourned yesterday.

TELLS OF QUIZ

Park told of the two days' questioning which precipitated Soles' confession. On the first day the ex-Army captain insisted he had returned home to find his wife, fatally shot, moaning on a bed. On the second day, Park related, the signed confession was obtained. Here was the confession brought out through Park:

Mr. Park:

Q.—Now, Bob, just sit down there and tell your story in your own way from the time you were downtown.

A.—Now stop me if I get rather bawled up.

Mr. Connors:

Q.—Just take your time; nobody is rushing you; you got lots of time, just that those people get it down right.

A.—Well, I left downtown McKeesport at some time between 1 and 1:30 and drove my car directly to my garage near my home and walked one block to my residence. Opening the front door, I proceeded to a downstairs bedroom, noticing a light on.

I also noticed my wife sitting on a straight-backed chair near a dresser.

Q.—Just go ahead, Bob, and tell your own story.

A.—I recall she was smoking a cigaret and looked at me for a moment, admonished me for being out late and not behaving.

I had been drinking somewhat that evening and she probably noticed this also. I proceeded across the room to my own chifforobe and, opening the drawers, started to rearrange the clothing which we had with us on a trip to Atlantic City for five or six weeks.

RECALLS LOUD TALK

I recall her getting off the chair and approaching me at the other side of the room, talking rather loudly and I returned the conversation in a loud tone.

Just what was said is not exactly clear to me, but she made one remark which to me seemed to be quite nasty, and which as I recall was to the effect that I was out sleeping——

Whereupon I evidently became quite incensed and must have taken one of the guns which I had in my chifforobe and fired it at her, although this is not at all clear in my mind.

She then fell forward and what I did with the gun in my hand is not clear, but I recall picking her up from the floor and placing her in the bed next to the doorway. There is then a slight period of uncertainty as to what was said between us, but there must have been something said as to what people would say and who was to blame for the accident

I then recall getting a telephone book, pen, ink and paper for her to write a statement—"Dear Bob, I am no good to myself or anybody else and am getting worse in place of better. Please forgive me for doing this." Signed "Larue, lovingly," she had on there "lovingly."

This note was placed on a dressing table with the telephone book on it and must have been done by myself as she was then lying in bed and could hardly have moved.

READ COMIC STRIPS

I do not recall undressing for bed after this, but it must have been that way, and putting my pajamas on I retired and read the comic strip for a period of 15 to 20 minutes and returning to the bedroom. My mind suddenly realized that my wife was very ill and asking her what had happened she told me that she had shot herself, whereupon I proceeded to the rear of the house and called her father from his bedroom upstairs.

He came down to our room and administered water to her, asking me to get a doctor, and both of us becoming rather excited, he ran out of the door to get Dr. Jordan, two blocks from the house, and I called him on the telephone. He reached the house at the same time I talked with Dr. Jordan on the phone, who advised me to call also Dr. Heisey, and he himself called Dr. Heisey.

I believe when Dr. Jordan came into the house, if I remember correctly, he and I discussed the matter of calling the cops and I said "yes " and went to the phone to do so, and Officer Connelly and Lieut. Eckels came to the house in a short time. In the meantime, I having had such a shock over all the affairs and perhaps having had too much to drink and my head being rather befuddled, I began to ask my wife questions and she repeated that she had shot herself and that the gun was lying on the floor near the bed, but I found the gun underneath the bed with one shell fired out of six.

ERROR ON GUN

There is a discrepancy here, because the gun which evidently caused the accident was a .45-caliber and the one picked off the floor was a .38-caliber. I don't remember putting that thing back in that drawer.

In the meantime, Dr. Heisey had arrived and while the two doctors were administering to my wife, I took the officers through the house while they were looking for damage caused by the bullet, and in a short short time Dr. Heisey ordered the ambulance, taking Mrs. Soles to the hospital at McKeesport.

In the meantime the ambulance arrived and Mrs. Soles was taken to the hospital and the doctors and officers and myself arriving there in different conveyances. Mrs. Soles was ill until the next afternoon, June 20, when she passed away.

I have read the above statement, which was made at my own free will and accord.

ROBT. S. SOLES.

Witnessed:
CHAS. T. DOYLE.

Before Park testified Mrs. Hardy, courageously baring the story of her relations with Soles, took the stand.

Q.—I understand you've been under a doctor's care, Mrs. Hardy?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, if you have any difficulty answering questions, I'll go slower.

Mrs. Hardy testified she was a registered nurse, a widow and had one son.

Q.—Was Mr. Soles in your home Saturday night, June 17?

A.—Yes, he was, but only for a few minutes.

Q.—When did you next see him?

A.—Sunday night (the night LaRoux was shot).

Q.—What time did he arrive?

A.—Shortly after 11 o'clock.

Q.—How long did he stay there?

A.—He stayed until after one.

Q.—How far is it from your apartment to the Soles home?

A.—About 10 or 15 minutes' drive.

Q.—Was Mr. Soles driving that night?

A.—I believe he was.

Q.—When was the next time you heard from Mr. Soles?

TOLD OF SHOOTING

A.—About 5:30 the next morning, he called me.

Q.—He called you on the telephone?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Why?

A.—He told me LaRoux shot herself. I said what? He said LaRoux shot herself. I said, when? He said about 10 minutes of 12. He asked me, "What time was it when I left," and I said, "It was after one."

Q.—Did he tell you where he was calling from?

A.—Yes, in the hospital.

Q.—Did you go up to the Soles home to see the remains of Mrs. Soles?

A.—Yes, on Thursday.

Q.—How long had Mr. Soles been coming to see you?

A.—Off and on since the first of the year.

Q.—Had you ever contemplated marriage with Mr. Soles?

A.—No.

Q.—Had you ever talked marriage with Mr. Soles prior to Mrs. Soles' death?

A.—We had talked about marriage generally, but we were never engaged.

Q.—Did you ever talk about marrying?

'FOND OF MR. SOLES'

A.—No, we just talked about marriage generally. We never talked about marrying ourselves.

Q.—Was Mr. Soles in love with you?

A.—I couldn't say that.

Q.—Were you in love with him?

A.—I was fond of Mr. Soles.

Q.—How often do you say he came to your apartment?

A.—I couldn't say, exactly.

Q.—Well, it was seven months. Would you say he came once or twice a month—about 15 times?

A.—Not that often.

Q.—Well, about five or six times?

A.—Perhaps.

Q.—Did you ever discuss the death of Mrs. Soles with Mr. Soles?

A.—Quite a while afterwards. Mr. Soles was very nervous and upset. He was almost a complete nervous wreck.

Q.—Well now suppose you tell us what that discussion was as near as you can remember.

'WIFE WAS MOANING'

A.—Mr. Soles told me he came home and went to the (bed) room, where he heard his wife moaning. He said he asked her, "Are you still sick?" They had stopped on their way from Atlantic City, and for dinner one night they had some lobster, or some kind of sea food. He said he asked her, "Did you take any soda bi-carb?" He took a newspaper and sat in the bathroom for perhaps 4 minutes, and when he came back she was still moaning. He asked, "What's wrong." She told him, "I shot myself." He said, "What?" She said, "I shot myself."

Q.—How did you get the jewelry?

A.—Well, Miss Free suggested to Mr. Soles that he give it to me to keep until he decided what to do with it.

Q.—When did you get the jewel box?

A.—Three weeks after the shooting. I saw it was a bunch of junk and there was only one good piece of jewelry there.

'BORROWED MONEY'

Q.—Did Mr. Soles give you any money?

A.—No, I borrowed some money from him.

Q.—How much?

A.—One hundred and fifty dollars. Fifty dollars, three different times.

Q.—Did Mr. Soles tell you what clothing his wife was wearing when she was admitted to the hospital?

A.—No, he did not.

Q.—Do you know what a girdle is?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he tell you she wore one?

A.—No.

Q.—What was Mr. Soles' condition as to sobriety that Sunday night in your apartment?

A.—He was excited.

Q.—Don't you know what sobriety means?

A.—Well, I could smell liquor on his breath.

Q.—Did he do any drinking at your apartment?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you give him anything to drink?

A.—No.

Q.—How many times did you discuss the death of Mrs. Soles with Mr. Soles?

A.—About a half-dozen times.

Q.—He always maintained she didn't shoot herself?

A.—Yes, he did.

NEVER SAW 'SUICIDE NOTE'

Q.—Did you ever discuss the note?

A.—Yes. He said, "There's somethng about this note that will tell the story."

Q.—Did he tell you he inquired what was wrong with his wife before he went into the bathroom (on the night she was shot)?

A.—Yes. He took it for granted she had indigestion.

Q.—Did he tell you she was shot before or after he went into the bathroom?

A.—No.

Q.—When was the last time Soles was in your apartment before he was arrested?

A.—The day before.

Q.—The day or night before?

A.—The night before.

Q.—Mrs. Hardy, how do you fix the time so definitely (on the night LaRoux was shot and Soles was in the Hardy apartment)?

A.—Well, I glanced at the clock. I knew it was after one and I told him it was after one and he'd better go.

Q.—Where did you keep that (jewelry) box at home?

A.—In my clothes hamper.

Q.—You had that box how many months after the death?

A.—About three weeks after.

Q.—Did you ever examine the contents?

HAD GOOD JEWELRY

A.—Miss Free, Mr. Soles and I looked at it. I told Mr. Trainor (county detective) there was only one piece of good jewelry there—a watch. I had good jewelry.

Q.—When did you intend to give it back?

A.—Well, I didn't want anybody else to get—

Q—Did you know he had other jewelry in a private box?

A.—Yes. Mrs. Soles had good jewelry. I think that's where he said it was.

Eaton then cross-examined Mrs. Hardy.

Q.—When did you first know Mr. Lynch?

A.—About five years ago.

Q.—You were a tenant in the same building?

A.—Yes. He had an apartment below. I nursed him for two months.

Q.—Did you ever talk with the defendant about Mr. Lynch?

A.—Yes. The first time Mr. Soles came to my apartment was to apoligize for Mr. Lynch's attentions to me.

Haggerty objected to this and was sustained. The answer was stricken off the record.

DENIES WEARING GEMS

Q.—Under what circumstances did you get the jewelry?

A.—Mr. Soles was carrying them around and Miss (Anna) Free said, "Why don't you leave them with Rose?"

Q.—Were they given to you as a present?

A.—Oh, no.

Q.—Did you ever wear any?

A.—I did not.

Q.—Why did you assist in the inventory (at the Soles home after the death)?

A.—Because I took care of him (Mr. Lynch) during sickness and drunkenness.

ROBINS HERALD WARM SPELL

A rainy belt is approaching from Colorado and likely will arrive Monday, he said.

Washer and Ironer Only Thompson Property

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 17.—(AP.)—A washing machine worth $15 and an electric ironer valued at $35 are all that remain of the $70,000,000 estate of a one-time king of coal.

Appraisers reported to the Fayette County Court yesterday that these two items represent all the personal property left unencumbered by Josiah V. Thompson, who once ruled a Western Pennsylvania empire of bituminous coal.

"One electric mangle, $35; one electric washer, $15," is the way Appraisers Charles S. Ramsey and Rolla M. Vardell put it in their report.

The appraisal did not include realty holdings claimed by Thompson creditors who permitted the aging coal king to retain a residence in his 52-room mansion long after he had gone bankrupt. He had built the million dollar show place for "Hunnie" Hawes, his Broadway show girl wife.

The appraisers indicated that Thompson died penniless last fall in spite of hints in his will that valuable articles and documents were hidden in secret places about the mansion.

Many of the art objects he collected from the far ends of the earth were sold at auction recently, bringing prices far below their original cost. The mansion is now a convent. Thompson's coal empire crumbled just after the war.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XVI -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

And after David had reigned in Hebron for seven and a half years as king of Judah, the chiefs of Israel anointed him king over all Israel. So David went up to Jerusalem and ruled there, and called it the city of David. And when David went back to Judah to fetch the ark of God, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark and took hold of it, because the oxen shook it. And God smote Uzzah, and he died.

So David feared the Lord, and carried the ark aside into the house of Obededom; but then the Lord blessed all that house. So David went again to bring the ark to Jerusalem, and he danced before the Lord.

But when the ark at last was come unto the City of David, Michal, Saul's daughter, looking through a window, saw King David leaping and dancing before the Lord, and seeing this she despised him in her heart. (Continued next week)

COUNCIL MAPS PROGRAM OF RECOVERY

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—In the interest of using the Lenten season, which began Wednesday, for a united emphasis upon spiritual advance throughout all denominations, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has outlined a "spiritual recovery program." This program, as announced by Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of the Church Council, urges the churches during the Lenten period to give intensive effort to cultivating the devotional life, to personal witnessing for Christ, and to bringing new members into the Church and instructing them in the meaning of church membership.

In officially approving the program, the executive committee of the Council called special attention to these aspects as having great spiritual value:

"The widespread observance of the fellowship of prayer during Lent as a means of cultivating the devotional life.

"A period of evangelistic emphasis and personal witnessing for Christ preceding Easter and leading up to an ingathering into the Church during Holy Week.

"A united observance of Pentecost Sunday, May 20, as an occasion for emphasis upon the divine mission of the Church and the guidance of the Holy Spirit."

A new note in the program is the attention which is given to Pentecost, which this year falls on May 20, as the anniversary of the beginning of the Christian Church. Pastors are advised to regard Easter as the climax, but to use the 50 days between Easter and Pentecost as a period of continuing evangelism and of training church members in a fuller realization of the significance of the Church.

Dame Rachel Discusses League at Friday Club

The League of Nations' social service, health and child welfare activities are things that have kept the international flag flying over Geneva, Dame Rachel Crowdy told the Friday Morning Club in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday. Her talk on "International Aspects of Social Reform" had to do with these three phases of the league's work.

She told of what had been done, through an underworld investigation toward eliminating international traffic in women and girls. What has been done to control the drug traffic was also described. By means of steps taken for the protection of illegitimate children, Dame Rachel said it was discovered that 19 out of 42 countries had said the problem of the illegitimate child was not a problem of the father, nor the mother, nor the government, which left them unprotected. One phase of child welfare work that is now going on concerns the effect of unemployment on children, the distinguished Briton said.

Damascus School Founder Here to Make Plea For Aid In Work

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

An earnest-eyed woman, Latvian-born of Scandinavian parents, who has become American by adoption and now lives in Damascus, the oldest living city in the world, has come all the way back to her adopted land to plead for help in the work to which she has dedicatetd her life in far-off Syria. She is Dr. Christine Adamson Essenberg, who founded and is the head of the American School for Girls in Damascus.

During her two-day visit in Pittsburgh (yesterday and today) Dr. Essenberg is the guest of Dr. Thyrsa W. Amos, who is on the board of the American School. Dr. Essenberg's life reads like a page out of some book of fiction.

She was brought up in the almost feudal home of a German nobleman and was forbidden to study the sciences because that was not done by women. When, at 21, and teaching languages in St. Petersburg, Dr. Essenberg went through the First Revolution, she vowed to devote her life to freeing men from ignorance and hatred.

In America she found opportunity to take up studies formerly denied her and obtained degrees at Valparaiso University and the University of California. For nine months she taught biology in the Constantinople Woman's College, and it was on her way from Rome from that position that she stopped in Damascus and became interested in the Moslem women. She even gave up her position to undertake the foundation of the American School. That was in 1925.

Although the Moslems have shown nothing but the friendliest attitude, the school had encountered many difficulties—the rebellion of the Druses, the bombardment of Damascus and the flight of a large part of the population, a typhoid fever epidemic and lack of pay for teachers. The enrollment is about 100 (Arabs, Hindus and one Persian), and the problems of the student in this school are not those of young women in other countries, Dr. Essenberg says.

The greatest difficulty at first was in teaching hygiene, but now, with the aid of microscopes, the women see what filth does and the influence of the school is carried into the Moslem homes. Only recently a graduating student wrote so well and so convincingly on the emancipation of women that her paper was published. Before that only sheiks had spoken the language with such correctness. Another student is helping her husband translate a medical book into Arabic.

The Moslem men now look up to the women and the school is functioning as a social, recreational and health center. Studies are carried on in French, Arabic and English.

CHURCH MARKS 50TH YEAR

The First Paptist Church of Munhall received a $2,000 fiftieth anniversary gift yesterday from an unidentified donor. The Rev. H. E. Shade, pastor, said the money was given with the understanding that it should be drawn from the bank in small amounts when needed by the church.

The Rev. Dr. Carey S. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Altoona, delivered a sermon last night closing the anniversary week. John D. Miller and Mrs. Priscilla Marsh, oldest members of the congregation, were presented baskets of roses.

A COIFFURE—SHOWN FORE AND AFT—FOR HALO HATS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

This is the banged coiffure which will make the upturned halo hats a possibility for many faces that now decline to wear them. Note the sculptural balance of the side face curls, and the soft mass of ringlets which make the whole back of the head a pretty setting for any type of hat.

MAYBE THE answer to the off-the-face-hat—Breton sailor, boulevard halo, or just rain-in-the-face sou'wester—is a crisp curl in the hair. Not every one has the brow that looks its pristine best when completely exposed to the public, yet an upturned hat is frequently a piquant fillip to a set of pretty features. So, if you can arrange to have the sort of hair which can be policed into just the right places around the face to decorate any bits that look too naked, the combination of halo hat and open face will be perfect.

* * *

IT TAKES curly hair to react to any coiffure discipline that includes stray wisps. Straight hair, except for Latin sideburns and spike accents, has to be controlled in long, burnished strands that are anchored firmly to the main scheme of things.

Forthright bangs, thick for the face with generous features, delicately cut for the cameo face, are very becoming to lots of girls. It is not necessary to be a Katharine Hepburn with them, either; they will look better groomed and more conventional if they are flat and loosely waved than if they tangle up exotically.

* * *

IT IS QUITE feasible to have only the ends of one's crown of glory permanently waved to own the foundation of a coiffure that can be gentled to make any fashionable hat becoming. The style for hair that came in last year, demanding that the top of the head be flatly shiningly coiffured still holds good, so it is curly ends that are important.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS!

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

Beware of Men Who Tire Of Their Wives

You have a new job. Only several months old. And it includes such a charming BIG BOSS.

You are young and pretty, and full of sentimentality.

It was hard while you did not have work. You stayed at home with your people, and helped your mother around the house. And was sick enough of it to do most anything. You longed so for the fripperies, the lace jabots and the snake skin pocketbooks and the shoes made of shiny leather that polish nicely when sitting on a high stool with Sambo bending over your tootsies.

Now all these things are coming your way, and into the bargain your heart is beating a rat-tat-tat. For the BIG BOSS, you say, is in love with you.

For a couple of weeks, now, you and he have been on an important job, and you have had to stay over hours, and he has insisted you eat dinner with him, and he drives you home, afterwards, in his limousine.

AN ATTENTIVE MAN

It is all so wonderful. The heroine in a story, you are. And moreover, when you go out with the fellows you used to enjoy, they are so stale and unprofitable. They haven't the smallest idea how to treat a girl. Driving her around in a flivver, forgetting to tip the doorman, and crowding her into cheap eating places, and always looking at the inexpensive side of the menu.

Men who are up and coming have no appeal. It is men like the BIG BOSS who have everything already that makes the sun stand still for you.

Imagine swinging into a real cafe, and sitting in one of those shaded corners and having the waiter hovering over you as if you were the Queen of Sheba.

Imagine the BIG BOSS saying let us try so and so tonight. And then the treat arrives, and it is something your mother never had on your home table. Like mushrooms under glass. Or artichokes with fancy sauce. Or frogs' legs.

Also he orders you a cocktail. And you drink it, and a sweet dizziness creeps in all over you, and the man across the table loses any wrinkles or baldness he has ever had for you, and he becomes Don Juan and Clark Gable baked in the same cake pan.

TIME TO BEWA...

How he talks to you of being out of love with his wife. In fact that he never was in love with her at all. That even from the first it was but proximity and everything arranged by the old folks. He speaks of trips sou in airplanes, of ocean voyages on the big liners just as if these things were passed out with every 75 cent pair of gauze stockings.

And you drive home with him and you don't see the scenery at all, for he slips, so adroitly that it appears to be almost an accident, his arm about you and your head rests on his shoulder, and he speaks of his tremendous respect for the working girl in general, and leaves you thinking.

And right there, take care. Beware. You are out with a smooth one, sister. That's an old gag. Respect where a man is concerned, especially one who is telling you at the same time he is all out of love with his wife, just stays put at exactly the place your wisdom says that it shall. But if your emotions get the better of that wisdom, it is just too bad.

You also say you have located this wife of the BIG BOSS. It was as she got out of her own private car and sailed into a department store. You followed her all about as if you were a detective, and saw her buy apparel six at a time, and face lotions that you've only looked at on the shelves, and perfume that when you eavesdropped and heard the cost, would have set you back a week in your salary.

TROUBLE AHEAD

Your blood had a chill then and there. Your ambition took on the warmth. And going home in the street car, you imagined yourself going over exactly the same ground as this woman had. You were getting the same ultra respect from the clerks and sweeping down aisles in the same swinging manner. It was slushy, hazy action, though, and there were much of the gaze of innocent imagination about it.

You shopped and bought, but always was there the aroma of cocktails in the air and your boss' well-groomed self was nearby and you rode home with him in that luxurious car of his, and his arm was protecting you.

And let me say right here, don't put too much faith in that STRONG RIGHT ARM OF HIS.

A man who says he never was in love with his wife is a CAD.

The thing is, when a man is out of love with one woman and fascinated with another, he forgets much about the first woman, whether she is his wife or not. It is with him, exactly the same incident, when, as a little boy, he stood dripping wet before his mother, and insisted he hadn't been in the swimming pool.

Your BIG BOSS isn't a man with a reputation you say of trifling. Maybe he isn't. And then it is that much worse for you.

Remember, sister, if you intend keeping up this going out with him, there is a skid ahead for someone.

And you're the LIKELY SUBJECT.

'WHO'S KNOCKING AT MY DOOR?'

-o- -o-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Things knock on the heart in the night-time. If you are no longer a young thing, it's memories, lovely ones, and those that we push back into the place called Limbo. What causes my eyes to open in the middle of the night may pass you by, in deep, serene sleep from the mystery-deep story you could not leave.

But in the deep night you have heard the same knocking, the drumming of the same two fists, you and every other woman, that I too have. Love's thrilling hand comes at the door some time. Also the gentle, unwelcome knocking of ancient Father Time.

"WHO IS IT?" Somebody's knocking at the door. The moon shines, the deep blue sky broods and shimmers with stars. Who would think that calm little Jane sits bolt upright with fluttering heart, and lies awake dreaming wide-eyed of the young man down the block. It was LOVE at the door; and the young man may look just a young man to you; but he is really Launcelot in tweeds!

Love is welcome; but that other he who knocks is dreaded, and Jane leans on the door against him. Perhaps the first gray hair was most astoundingly found. Perhaps a line at the corner of a lovely blue eye. Or, perhaps—anyway, there in the moonlight with sleep casting spells in the bed curtains, suddenly this low knocking comes, and Amelita listens with a stopped heart. WHO CAN IT BE? Is it Father Time? Go away Father Time. No lady likes you there.

A woman's dreams are driven far from a perfumed pillow mostly by these two. The persistent, hurrying, vision-summoning presence of the thoughts of LOVE, or time. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Too, Too Sweet!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am having some friends in on Tuesday evening, and want suggestions about the things to serve. How about tomato cocktail, ambrosia, candy, cake, nuts, and coffee. Please tell me if these things go well together, also if the coffee should be served with cream in large cups, or small cups?

When could eggnog be served?

S.

Your menu, it seems to me, is very much over-balanced on the sweet side. Ambrosia . . . you mean the orange, grated coconut, confectioner's sugar combination, don't you? . . . candy, cake . . . these are a terrible sweet combination. The addition of nuts makes it very rich, and eggnog would be the final touch of cloying sweetness and richness. I think that it would be better, if, instead of the ambrosia, you plan to serve a salad, say a fruit salad with a simple sauce. And with this some hot rolls or biscuits, or simple sandwiches. Serve your eggnog some time before you serve your foods.

The Widow's Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—A friend of mine whose father died some time ago insists that her mother should now use her own name, which is Mrs. Elizabeth Pale, and I say she should continue using her husband's name, Mrs. William Pale, and never sign her name directly with Mrs., but this way, "Elizabeth Brown Pale," and over to the left (Mrs. William Pale). Who is correct?

2—My friend also says that banks do not permit a married woman to use her husband's name, whether living or not. Is this correct?

I shall be very glad if you will answer these questions. I may be wrong, but I will never be satisfied until you settle this for me. B. V.

1—You are right, exactly right. A widow uses the same form of name that she used when her husband was living. She uses the same visiting card, with Mrs. William Wells Hale engraved on it, usually nowadays not even changing the card for a black-bordered one.

And you are so right about her signature to a letter:

Yours very sincerely,
ELIZABETH BROWN PALE,
(MRS. WILLIAM PALE.)

For a widow to use her first name in her formal name is to show very poor taste.

2—When a married woman or a widow registers her signature for checks at her bank, she should register Elizabeth Brown Pale, or, if she prefers, Elizabeth Pale, or sometimes she uses a middle initial, Elizabeth B. Pale. But the first form is the usual one, registering as it does, her first name, the surname of her maiden name, and the surname of her married name. For the records of the bank, she may register her formal married name . . . Mrs. William Wells Pale . . . but it is the informal name that she uses when she signs her checks.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Vulnerable Sacrifice

In the recent Grand Nationals of the United States Bridge Association, held in New York, two or three vulnerable teams profitably made a sacrifice Slam bid against non-vulnerable opponents. It is an apparent anomaly for vulnerable Bridge players to dare to take a sacrifice at the range of six to prevent players who are not vulnerable from making a Slam. It is all the more remarkable when the combined honor strength of the vulnerable side is less than three honor-tricks, the only factor in their favor being that of extremely favorable distribution.

At one table, however, where Messrs. Samuel Fry, Jr., and Louis H. Watson were seated North and South, respectively, Mr. Watson declined to permit his opponents to deprive him of his Slam.

The hand was:
North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 10 ♡ 10 ◇ A 7 5 3 2 ♣ A K 10 6 5 3
♠ A Q 7 6 ♡ K J 9 6 2 ◇ 9 6 ♣ 7 4	West North East South	♠ 9 8 5 4 3 2 ♡ Q 8 5 4 3 ◇ 10 ♣ 9
	♠ K J ♡ A 7 ◇ K Q J 8 4 ♣ Q J 8 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇ (1)	1 ♡ (2)
4 ◇ (3)	4 ♡ (4)	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	6 ♡ (5)	6 NT (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Unquestionably a much better bid with South's hand would have been two diamonds. The hand has a wonderful fit with partner and sufficient honor-tricks for a Forcing Takeout. Had this bid been made, West, vulnerable, would never have entered the bidding.

2—A rather daring Overcall in view of the shaky trump suit.

3—A mild sort of Slam try in view of the fact that North raises above the notrump game limit.

4—A most daring Raise.

5—Not as bad as it looks. East places spade strength in West's hand by inference and thus feels that the loss in no event should be over three tricks. In Duplicate the value of the Slam with the rubber and trick bonus added would be 920 points, so even a penalty of 900 is worth taking.

6—Mr. Watson reasons that North and South probably hold at least 11 and possibly 12 tricks at notrump as well as at a suit. If a spade is opened he feels sure that the Slam can be made, whereas with a heart Opening the only question is whether North has five or six clubs.

In the play West chose to open a spade from his Ace-Queen, and thus not only 12, but 13 tricks were made.

At another table Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz, playing with Mr. Walter Malowan, successfully sacrificed by bidding six hearts, which was doubled and set two tricks for a penalty of 500 points.

The hand is a remarkable one in that it presents the opportunity for a safe vulnerable Slam sacrifice and also in that it points clearly to the fact that if you have a genuine Forcing Takeout in your hand you should make it in preference to a simple One over One response. Certainly West, with his hand, would not have dared to enter the bidding at the range of two if the bidding had gone:

North	South
1 ♣	2 ◇

With the announced strength of an Opening bid, reinforced by a Forcing Takeout by the Opener's partner, it would be the sheerest folly for any vulnerable player, however bold, to bid at the range of two.

Madge Tells Newlyweds of Avis' Newest Trick

As Mary put her tense query, "What did Avis try to pull?" Noel put his hand upon her arm.

"What does it matter now, sweetheart?" he asked, his voice vibrant with the protecting possessiveness of a newly-made husband. "We're safely married now. She can't do anything to us."

"Don't you be too sure of that!" Mary admonished him. "That dame has more mischief brewing in her dome, or I miss my guess. Tell me, Auntie Madge. Didn't she try to pull plenty? I couldn't see or hear anything of her, of course, for my face was toward the preacher, as a dutiful bride's should be, and I didn't dare to take a rubber out over the folks, but I felt it in my bones that she was up to tricks."

"She was," I returned laconically, for with swift decision I had resolved to tell Mary the truth, for fear she would imagine something worse. "But she didn't get anywhere, thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Underwood," I added.

Mary took me by the shoulders and shook me slightly.

"If you don't tell me right away what she did, I'm going to give an imitation of a whole lunatic asylum," she threatened. And without further urging, I told her of Avis' attempt to rise when the clergyman intoned, "If anyone can show just cause," and how she had fainted.

"She's in there now with Harry, Lillian, Katherine and her mother. She admitted to us that she'd been staging the swoon, but her mother thinks she is simply dizzy, and that she has a headache."

MISCHIEVOUS QUERY

"I'll say she's dizzy," Mary commented as I finished. Then her eyes flashed quizzically at Noel.

"Of course, Noel, it wouldn't be exactly clubby for a newly-wed bride to question her mate; but, darling, to steal a phrase from the royal family, 'Just what did you promise her that was worth all this hullabaloo on her part?'"

Her query was apparently all mischief, but I wondered if I caught a speculative look back of her mirth, and realized that Noel had fancied the same thing when he said shortly, "Don't talk like that, even in fun."

"All right, hubby-ducky-doodle-dums," Mary gibed, laughing up at him with so charming an expression that I did not wonder his eyes kindled with adoration as he looked at her. Then she turned to me, her face suddenly sober and anxious again.

"Has—has Mr. Veritzen missed Avis, do you think?"

"If he has, he hasn't said anything about it," I answered. "Don't worry about him. I'll manage everything. But, frankly, I am anxious to have you get away as soon as possible. Your scheme of flight seems to be working beautifully."

"Yes, isn't it?" Mary said in a low tone, looking around for possible eavesdroppers. "That was a master stroke of Mr. Underwood's to pretend to find something the matter with the new car and take it away. They all think it's in some garage, and that we're going to use the old car to make a getaway, and then change to the new one at the garage. Ronald says the kids have decorated the old car up with all sorts of gadgets—old shoes and 'We are just married' placards—and put enough rice in it to stock a chop suey joint for a week. And they have Bob's car all ready to trail us.

THE PLOTTER

"Ronald and Marion are pretending to help them, but they're really with us, and they'll keep them stalled in the house long enough for us to get down the back stairs and into Jerry Ticer's flivver. He's waiting behind the barn. He'll beat it across the fields—that old bus just loves fields—to his place, where our car is hidden, and we'll be away before they miss us."

"Have you pretended to put any baggage into this old car?" I asked.

Mary struck her hands together, then swept me a low bow.

"When you want a real, honest-to-goodness plotter, flag my Auntie Madge," she told Noel. "We never thought of that. Will you give Jim those empty suitcases out of my room, that are going to hold the clothes we're going to use for the Palm Beach trip—you know, the ones you are going to pack and send to us at Philadelphia?"

"Yes, I know." I nodded in acquiescence, and in comprehension of her plan.

"Tell Jim to put them in the car, trying to look as if he were putting over something. Oh, yes; better put something heavy in the suitcases—old books or something—and then lock them securely."

"I'll do everything—" I began, but stopped short as Mary clutched my arm.

"Look!" she whispered.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Trachoma a Contagious Affliction

A recent health report states that "trachoma," a chronic inflammation of the eyelids, has of late been found among prize fighters and wrestlers. To control the spread of this highly contagious disease, it is now required that all athletes be examined before they engage in any bout.

Dr. Copeland

To find trachoma among athletes is unusual. It is generally found where hygiene, sanitation, fresh air, sunlight and personal cleanliness are neglected. It is difficult to believe that any athlete in training would neglect these fundamental principles of health.

The disease is easily transmitted from one to another, and for this reason the present regulations for its control are to be applauded. There are few other diseases that spread as rapidly as trachoma. Because of this danger, immigrant officials are always on the alert to detect it. Any immigrant who shows signs of this infection is not permitted to enter the country.

Unfortunately, trachoma is often confused with a less important inflammation of the eye. In fact, the disease is often spoken of as "granulated eyelids." Though in its early stage it resembles that ailment, it is of a more serious nature.

The sufferer from trachoma first complains of a mild itching and burning of the eyes. As time goes on, the eyes water and the eyelids become red. The victim complains of severe pain when he is exposed to sunshine, bright lights and wind.

Immediate medical attention is necessary if the eyesight is to be saved. When neglected, the eyesight grows poorer and weaker. The victim is conscious of a cloudiness that results from damage to the eyeball.

Scars form along the inside of the eyelids. This causes the lids to be drawn inward and then the eyelashes painfully scratch the eyeball.

Never neglect any inflammation of the eyes, regardless of how simple or harmless it may appear to you. Avoid all patent medicines and remedies that are claimed to "cure" diseases of the eye. The eye is a delicate structure and requires the utmost skill in its care and treatment. It is always safer to consult a physician before using any home remedies.

Bear in mind that if the affliction is really trachoma, not only does the victim require medical attention, but energetic measures must be taken to protect other members of the family and the community from this disease. Since the ailment is highly contagious, and the material of the infection may be carried on the fingers, handkerchiefs or towels, or by direct contact with discharges from the infected eye, careful isolation is imperative. Bed clothing and linens that have been used by the afflicted persons must be kept separate and carefully sterilized.

Of course, children who are afflicted with trachoma should not be allowed to attend school. Until they have been completely cured of the infection they are a menace to others.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Enlarged pores are hard to bear. Women hate them. Treatment must be continued for a long time; it is a matter of making over the fabric of the skin. After every facial tubbing, use cold water freely. Once a day iron with ice. At night lave the skin surface with a saturate solution of boric acid; you can make it by dissolving one teaspoon of powdered boric acid in a cup of boiling water. Use oily cosmetics sparingly. Cut down on starchy foods and fats. Heavy meat dishes are taboo. Drink fruit juices.

A bunion is a dislocation of the joint of the big toe. When inflammation attacks the membrane covering of the joint, there is pain. The cause is a shoe that is so narrow that it pushes the big toe inward against its neighbor. In the beginning, broad toed shoes may correct the trouble, especially if a soft pad is placed between the big toe and the one next to it. High heels are out of the question when the joint shows signs of getting out of normal, natural position. Under such conditions alarming deformities of the foot may develop.

Household Hints

Equal quantities of methylated spirit and lemon juice make a good lotion for chapped hands. Bottle and use after washing.

To whiten handkerchiefs add one tablespoon of peroxide of hydrogen to the water in which they are rinsed after washing. This will also remove fruit stains.

Cover your kitchen table with a sheet of white asbestos, which can be bought in varying sizes and clamped on to the table. Hot saucepans can be placed on this without leaving marks or stains. When you have finished cooking, wipe it down with a damp cloth.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Baseball Dean Goes Out.
Rixey Oldest in Service.
Maranville Takes Rank.

Hemsley May Play Third.
Billiards of Many Types.
Mile Record in Peril.

The dean of active big league baseball figures has passed out in the retirement of Eppa Rixey, veteran left-hand pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds. There are two older men, still on the payrolls. Urban Faber, of the White Sox, will be 46 on September 6; Dolf Luque, of the Giants, will be 44 on August 4. But in length of continuous major league service, Rixey, who will be 43 on May 3, was tops in both circuits. Coming up from the University of Virginia to the Phillies in June, 1912, two months before the debut of Rabbit Maranville, he pitched 21 seasons under the big top, a career interrupted only by a year of war service in 1918. Faber did not become established in the majors until 1914. Luque did not pitch a major league game until 1914, and did not become a fixture until 1918.

Eppa Rixey

Rixey, traded by the Phils to the Reds in the winter of 1920 for Jimmy Ring and Greasy Neale, surpassed Faber, Luque and all the rest of the present pitching field in actual hurling as well as in time served. In his 21 seasons he pitched in 692 games and 4,494 innings, scoring 266 victories against 251 defeats. He struck out 1,350 batters, gave 1,082 bases on balls and allowed 4,633 hits. Four times he won 20 or more games in a season, his high mark being 25 wins in 1922. Rixey was a particular thorn in the side of the Pirates, beating them many times even in his declining years, when Cincinnati managers saved him especially for games against the Bucs. Rabbit Maranville now takes rank as the oldest player in the majors in point of service.

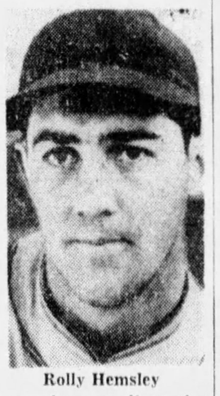
MILLER'S TWENTY-SECOND DODGER SEASON

Twenty-two years with the same baseball club would be quite a record for anybody, and 22 years with the Dodgers would appear to call for an extra medal, or wound stripe, or something. That's the notable service record of Otto Miller, former catcher and present coach, who is entering on his twenty-second season with the Brooklyn club. The Dodgers may change presidents, managers and lineups, but Miller keeps rolling along like Old Man River.

Miller broke in with the Dodgers in 1910 as an understudy to Billy Bergen and Tex Erwin. He caught all sorts of pitchers, including tough downers, knucklers and spitters—Nap Rucker, Larry Cheney, Burleigh Grimes, Leon Cadore, Jack Coombs, Sherrod Smith, Jeff Pfeffer, Dazzy Vance and more. Otto left the big show to manage Atlanta in 1923, and was with Indianapolis in 1924. He returned to the Dodgers as a coach in 1926 and has been on the same job ever since.

MAY TURN HEMSLEY INTO THIRD SACKER

More than once while Rolly Hemsley was catching for the Pirates, fans suggested that it might be a good move to convert him into an outfielder, on account of his speed. Rogers Hornsby may go that proposal one better. He says that if he fails in his own attempted comeback as a third baseman for the Browns the coming season, he is going to switch Hemsley to the hot corner. In support of the plan, Hornsby argues that Rolly is about as fast as they come, can cover ground, and with regular work will hold his own with most rivals as a hitter.



Rolly Hemsley

However, the Rajah is hopeful that the shift will not be necessary. He thinks he can make good in his own proposed shot at the third bag. Hornsby admits that he may not be able to cover ground as he formerly did, but asks what third baseman in the American League is covering ground as he should. He contends that Mike Higgins, of the A's, is the only first-flight third sacker in the circuit. Rogers believes that he can do as well as the rest in a fielding way, and says he knows he can outhit them.

MORE THAN HUNDRED TYPES OF BILLIARDS

How many varieties of billiards do you think could be played on the regulation table? While the subject was being discussed by some of the three-cushion stars competing in the world championship tournament in New York, one of the group estimated the number at 100, and when he appealed to Alfredo De Oro for confirmation, the Cuban veteran said that possibly that estimate was short of the actual total. De Oro, however, expressed the belief that for a true test of billiard skill, 10 to 15 styles of caroms might be played for what could be designated as an all-around championship.

Carom games have undergone more tinkering and experimental testing than all other sports combined. The three-cushion style has had its share. For a time there was a lot of controversy over shooting with different cue balls, and it gave the late Tom Foley an idea which he put into practice in Chicago—the scheme of having the two contestants shoot with the same ball. Charley Peterson afterward adopted the idea for some of his three-cushion tournaments. Foley introduced the plan by using red, white and blue balls for a handicap tournament in Chicago in November, 1900, with the white ball as the cue ball. So far as anyone could discover, it did not change the general effectiveness of counting in any way. The scores were about the same.

CAN BONTHRON SPUR KANSAN TO RECORD?

Glenn Cunningham, great Kansas runner, will have new opposition tonight in the Baxter mile, featuring the New York A. C. meet at Madison Square Garden, and some of the track experts see in that fact the possibility of a new indoor record for the distance. For in addition to his old rival, Gene Venzke, whom he has beaten seven times in eight meetings, Cunningham will be opposed for the first time by Bill Bonthron, Princeton star, and the chance of new figures being established is suggested by recollections of what Bonthron did against Jack Lovelock at Palmer Stadium last summer.

Bill Bonthron

It was the terrific pressure put on him by Bonthron's close opposition that forced Lovelock to 4:07:6, the fastest time ever traveled by a human runner. Bonthron himself ran that mile in 4:08.7, the fastest time ever registered by an American, and in view of that performance the possibility looms that if Bill does not actually succeed in beating Cunningham tonight he may press him hard enough, as he did Lovelock, to force the Kansan to smash a record to win. In the recent Millrose games on the same track, Cunningham probably could have improved his time of 4:11.2 if Venzke had given him a closer race. But Venzke never was able to push Cunningham in the finishing drive, while Bonthron may.

OLD CARNEGIE OUT TO CINCH TITLE TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The 1934 champion of the Central District Soccer League should be crowned this afternoon on the Beadling Field as old Carnegie and Clan Douglas meet.

Old Carnegie needs one point to clinch the title. That other clubs have been unable to stop the Beadling boys on their home lot and the Clansmen do not figure to get any place on the form they have exhibited this season.

Usually one of the best clubs in the district, the Clansmen have had a poor season, in and out play ruining any chances they may have had of getting into the title race.

The other game in the circuit finds Beltzhoover meeting Pittsburgh Rovers at Arsenal High School Field.

The Curry team left last night for St. Louis for its game with the Stix-Fuller eleven in the national open, western semi-final tomorrow. A special excursion is being run to the game over the Pennsylvania Railroad, leaving at 6:20 o'clock this evening. It is estimated that 100 local fans will make the trip.

Doyle Undergoes Appendix Operation

Charles J. (Chilly) Doyle, baseball expert of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, underwent an operation at Buhl Hospital in Sharon last night for appendicitis and hernia. The operation was performed by Dr. A. M. O'Brien and was pronounced successful.

The veteran writer was stricken ill after speaking on the Sun-Telegraph Trained Seals' radio sports program over WCAE Wednesday night, and when examination revealed an appendix infection he was removed to his home city for the operation.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE "UPHILL" RIVER—During my visit to Mexico City a few years ago, I visited the site of the famous optical illusion on a hillside a short distance from the city. Standing on an elevation slightly above the flowing stream, from where I made my sketch, it seemed the river indisputably flowed uphill. The illusion, however, is created by the fact that the city really lies below this point of observation, although it seems to be at exactly the same elevation.

TOMORROW: WASHINGTON NOT ALWAYS FIRST.

TARTAN QUINT BEATEN BY PENN STATE

By JESS (illegible)

There is a whop[illegible] of intercollegiate action [illegible] old sport card today, but very little of it will be served up for local consumption. The interest will be there, but that will be all.

All three of the local basketball varsities are to see action tonight. Pitt tackles Notre Dame at South Bend in a return clash; Carnegie's Tartans play their second game in as many evenings by taking on Wash-Jeff at Washington, and the Dukes open a short eastern trip against Bucknell at Lewisburg.

MAT TEAMS CLASH

Pitt's wrestlers will tug and toss with the matmen of West Virginia in a dual engagement at Morgantown, where the Penn State basketballers, who defeated our Tartans, 47 to 23, here last night, engage Sleepy Glenn's tired West Virginians.

In the Dukes' gymnasium the major event on the local program will be offered as the Duquesne and Temple boxing teams trade socks in an Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Conference match, while this afternoon, in the Pitt track house, the annual university indoor track and field championships will be run off. A field of some 200 contestants will attack the existing Panther records and Coach Carl Olsen, who should know, figures that at least four new marks will be established. The establishing will be done, of course, by the members of the varsity and freshman squads, there being only a slight chance of any unknown breaking into the hero ranks.

DUKES' BOXERS SET

Defeated by Wash-Jeff and West Virginia in bouts to date, but victors over Pitt, the Dukes are set to take down their second triumph at the expense of the none too potent Owl punchers. Coach Johnny Napoleon reports marked improvement in the work of his proteges. The following lineup of bouts has been announced:

115-pound class—Hastings, Duquesne, vs. Rubenstein.
125-pound class—Carr, Duquesne, vs. Pettina.
135-pound class—Pfansmith vs. Chapire.
145-pound class—Capt. Moore, Duquesne, vs. Cantanzaro.
155-pound class—Roseto, Duquesne, vs. Crossan.
165-pound class—Nee, Duquesne, vs. Konopka.
175-pound class—Powell, Duquesne, vs. Piconis.

CROFT SHOWS PROMISE

The work of an inexperienced trio of footballers, suddenly drafted into court ranks, was the most pleasing feature of Tech's battle against Penn State last night. The Tartans hardly expected to stop the Lions, what with having to go to bat with a patched-up lineup, but made a game try of it. The Silverman-Gibson - Edelblut - Freedel - Bigg combination that started the fray went along in fair manner for the first six minutes or so, but couldn't stop State's Capt. Norris McFarlane, a McKeesporter, and soon found itself far in the rear.

Coach Hannum inserted his draftees, Thurman Croft, Goona Sanford and Steve (Three Card) Trbovich into the action late in the first half and used them again in the second. The boys gave promise of developing into players of real value, especially Croft, who used his height and power well at center.

State led, 22 to 8, at the half. The Lions used a block (screen if you will) in the corners, fed the ball nisely to McFarlane and the latter came through with six field goals and as many fouls for a

GAME MONDAY

Duquesne vs. Pirates

Conclusive proof that whatever over-emphasis there is in college athletics has not sullied college hockey probably will be provided at Duquesne Garden tonight when Carnegie Tech meets the J. Scott Morgans, pace-setters in the City Hockey League, in a league engagement.

The Tartans made their league bow a week ago, when they held Duquesne to a 1-1 tie. This feat looked good enough until Wednesday, when the Dukes were handed a 6-1 setback by the Red Ravens, who previously had lost six straight games to the other three league members who lack the collegiate touch. In two games with the Morgans the Ravens came out second best by scores of 9-0 and 6-2.

After digesting this data a man who never has seen a hockey game can do a pretty fair job of figuring out where the Techs are going to be when they finish tonight's skirmish with the leaders. Boy, bring out the eight ball!

There is no denying that the Tartans and Dukes try very hard, indeed, and that they show plenty of the old college fight, but as the season wears on it is likely to become more and more apparent that the oldtime City Leaguers (those who lifted the lid early in January) pack too many guns for the representatives of our institutions of higher learning. By JULIUS LEVIN

Any team that desires to represent Section II of the City League in the annual playoff series for the City League championship with the victor in the Section I race will have to dislodge the Perry High School quintet.

Perry, led by Bob Kornick, star forward, defeated Langley, 30 to 25, in a nip-and-tuck battle on the Langley floor yesterday afternoon to gain undisputed possession of the section lead. Kornick had a field day, accounting for 17 points, six field goals and five fouls being his modest contribution to the triumph.

Perry took the lead early and held it throughout.

South Hills remained in the running as a contender for the title by beating Vocational, 50 to 20, while Carrick defeated Oliver, 33 to 22, in the other contest in the section.

In Section I, the crack South quintet won its ninth game in a row, walloping Allderdice, 53 to 13, and Connelley remained half a game behind by beating Peabody, 52 to 15.

Sobehart, Connelley forward, turned in a dazzling exhibition of individual play, bagging 11 field goals and two fouls for a total of 24 points. The lineups:

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

Though badly beaten by Sharkey in 15 rounds at Brooklyn, N. Y., October 12, 1931, Primo and the author were far from discouraged. See felt sure that the giant would be ready to "shoot on his own" for the title after a good rest, so they returned to Europe late in 1931 consoled with a brilliant K. O. of Campolo and a 10-round victory over King Levinsky. Late in January, the 1932 Carnera campaign got under way in Paris . . .

CHAPTER XXIX

By LEON SEE

Developer and Former Manager of Primo Carnera, World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

Before I conclude this story, let me retrace my steps a bit and recall a few fleeting memories of Primo Carnera's career.

There is a French proverb which says that traveling forms a youth.

Primo was not only developing from the physical viewpoint in a very remarkable way, becoming every day more harmonious, swifter in his movements and more precise, but his brain was clearing itself from the fog of his unlucky youth and, from time to time, he said things really humorous. Here are two examples:

Primo Carnera

We were speeding one day when a strident whistle caused Primo, who was driving, to slam his considerable right foot on the brake. A policeman approached with the characteristic slowness which certainty of an assured prey gives. His surprise at recognizing Primo at the wheel was not sufficient (as we had hoped it would be) to make him unbend.

"I'm going to give you a ticket for speeding," said he, sternly. You were going at least 60 miles an hour. Have you anything to say?"

Primo answered:

"I admit I was going a little fast, but do not think that you are the only one to give me tickets. If you give me one, I might give you two!"

OUT-TALKS POLICEMAN

American policemen often are "tough guys" who take poorly to pleasantry. The one with whom we had to deal grew suddenly dark in the face:

"Pay attention to whom you are speaking! Though you may be Primo Carnera I can arrest you. What do you mean by two tickets?"

"Exactly, two tickets," replied Primo without laughing, "and I bet you a dollar, you'll accept them. There is no offense to it: In two nights I fight Pat Redmond in Brooklyn and here are two good ringsides."

The affair ended over several glases of near beer. And when the policeman definitely relaxed and made the inevitable request for a photograph of Carnera in boxing attitude, Primo autographed one to him like this:

"You wanted to give me a ticket, but I gave you two."

In the course of the conversation, which had become very amicable, the officer said to Primo:

"Your job is certainly better than ours, because we are unable to buy ourselves 8-cylinder cars, but, if some day you should hang up the gloves, you'd make a swell cop . . . We are kidded for the size of our feet, but yours sure would take the cake!"

PULLS 'FAST ONE'

Another time, it was in Philadelphia, Primo and I were walking along an avenue. Suddenly, a big fellow coming from the opposite direction on the other side, saw us, hurried across, and approached Primo, a large smile on his face, his hand extended:

"Hello, Primo, how do you do?"

"Pardon me," replied Carnera, "do you know me?"

"Do I know you! Why sure, I've even fought you!"

"You have boxed against me?" asked the Italian. "Where was that? I have fought so many places in America that I have come to the point where I can't remember . . ."

"But, look here, you must remember this, it was in Memphis . . ."

"Ah, I have it now," said Primo. "You are Big Jim Sigman. You must excuse me, I only saw you for a minute . . ."

PRIMO'S POPULARITY

If Primo Carnera had not yet attained the height of his prowess, his popularity already surpassed imagination. Never had any boxer, not even Carpenter or Dempsey, enjoyed such enormous publicity. Everywhere the giant Italian was hailed by vast crowds. It was impossible for him to take a hundred steps in the street without being immediately followed by an ever growing pack of admirers, which often became verw embarrasing.

I remember one day in Cleveland, when Carnera wished to have a new crystal put in his watch. The jeweler was a few yards from our hotel and we had the unhappy idea of going there on foot. We had not gone half way when a hundred persons were following the colossus. On arriving at the shop the number had tripled. When we entered, this mob stopped outside, pressing against the window glass, trying to get a glimpse of their idol, the late arrivals thinking there was an accident or a hold-up in the jewelry shop.

The distracted shopkeeper, fearing to see his windows broken under the pressure, begged us to get out. Impossible! The crowd was too dense. Fortunately, the police, uneasy over this mob and thinking there was something wrong, came running. Whistles resounded from every direction. Mounted policemen came and succeeded in dispersing the multitude.

Another time, it was in London, we had left the Hotel Savoy to take a little stroll down the Strand. In less than three minutes a hundred persons made up a procession. Unnerved—although in reality infinitely flatered because at heart he adored popularity—Primo quickly entered a three-and-six pence store hoping to lose those who were following. This was a disaster! All his admirers trailed in his wake through the huge store. A veritable riot! In an instant, watch over the different counters became impossible. Objects disappeared like magic. Some things fell down and were stepped on . . . The manager came running, and, with a praiseworthy presence of mind, he shoved Primo toward a service stairway which ended in a hidden door opening on a side street. From there we ran toward a taxi to save ourselves.

GREETED IN CANADA

A volume would not be enough to tell all the innumerable adventures which this popularity brought us, a popularity which had surpassed my most optimistic calculations, but I must, however, tell of this adventure in Toronto:

A contract called us to Canada, where Primo was to fight one of the numerous heavyweights in whose mind a defeat more or less was not of vital importance!

Primo, proud of his magnificent 8-cylinder car, which he already drove with skill, had preferred to make the journey from New York by motor. The big Italian colony of the city desired to accord their celebrated compatriot a triumphal reception. An imposing delegation intended waiting for us at the station with all honors, but, learning that we were arriving by automobile, the admirers of the giant had come in an imposing procession to meet him on the road. Our car was stopped at the entrance to the city by an unbelievable gathering of cars of every description, decorated with the Italian colors. A hundred musicians in green uniforms, with magnificent plumed hats, constituted two rival bands!

TRIUMPHANT ENTRY

The cavalcade started its march with the two bands in front, fortunately, playing only alternatively the most spirited and most Italian pieces. Primo, bowing right and left with dignity, had taken his place in a big open car entirely draped in green, white and red, and more than a hundred cars followed, mine closing the procession. The cavalcade stretched out for almost a mile. The brass instruments aroused the population; a double row of spectators lined our passage to right and left. All the doors and windows were filled with people drawn by the noise. It was tremendous!

Never a sovereign coming to visit his dominion, an aviator having accomplished a great flight, a general returning victorious, had known such triumph!

But it was written that we would beat all records of burlesque. The route we had to follow made us pass through a sort of a Luna Park with numerous attractions. Both sides of our route were lined with decorated booths containing the usual freaks, etc. And as an unexpected result—an indescribable consequence of the popularity of Primo—the infernal fanfare of the attending Italian musicians provoked the exit from their tents of the fat lady, the serpent man, the bearded woman, the flea trainer and the sword swallower.

OUT-FREAKS FREAKS

Once more Carnera had conquered! He had shown himself to be a greater attraction than the attractions!

The ape man—who did not allow himself to be admired for less than sixpence per spectator—would willingly have paid a shilling to see Primo. The woman without arms forget herself so far as to clap her hands!

And stretched out in the depths of Primo's big car I contemplated impeturbable, the result of my work: Everywhere the traffic was stopped, the Toronto police, in white gloves with leather helmets—as big and handsome as their London colleagues—stopped cross traffic on the route of our interminable and gala procession.

We were received on the steps of the City Hall by the Lord Mayor, who solemnly presented to Primo an emblem in iron made to represent the keys to the city . . .

Primo knew how to receive such homage with amiable condescension!

LOCAL LACROSSE TEAM DEFEATS CHICAGOANS

By CARL W. SHATTO

The local Yellow Jackets, of the American and International Lacrosse Association, have victory No. 1 of the second half race safely stowed away.

The Jackets took the Chicago Blue Ribbons over the jumps last night in Motor Square Garden, winning 18 to 13, and with more or less ease. The Blue Ribbons are conceded to be the team having the best chance of winning the second half title and meeting the Jackets in the championship playoff series, but they'll have to play better lacrosse than they did last night if they are to oust the locals.

Pittsburgh led, 2 to 1, at the end of the first period; 9 to 3 at the half; 14 to 7 at the end of the third and then were outscored in the fourth after the game was in the bag.

Boulaine, substitute forward, and Bain, Chicago reserve, tied for scoring honors with five goals each.

The contest was a cleanly played affair, not a single battle being waged between the individual players and not a noggin being cracked by the stick of an adversary. The lineup:

Pittsburgh—18.		Chicago—13.
Cordick	G	McArthur
P. Langevin	D	Sanderson
N. Langevin	D	Kingdom
LaFrance	C	Latchford
Vincent	F	Hatton
Boulaine	F	Stevenson

Score by periods:

Glenn Wright Given Release

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Forest Glenn Wright, once the National League's grpatest shortstop, was handed his unconditional release by the Brooklyn Dodgers today.

Making his professional debut with the Independence (Kas.) club of the Southwest League in 1921, Wright broke into the big time with the Pittsburgh Pirates three years later. For five campaigns he was one of the chief cogs in the powerful Pirate arrays of 1924-28, including the championship teams of 1925 and 1927.

An arm injury led to his trade, in December, 1928, to Brooklyn for Jess Petty and Harry Riconda.

Pirates Purchase College Slab Ace

The Pittsburgh Pirates have purchased a new pitcher, recommended by Red Lucas. He is Alvin Graham, former Vanderbilt University ace, a southpaw, who stands 6 feet 4 inches in his socks.

The recruit will be turned over to the Little Rock club of the Southern Association for seasoning.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The Class A squash racquets and the local handball team crowns, long kept in abeyance by postponements and tightness of the league races, stand excellent chances of being dished out definitely before the conclusion of the current week-end. The outcome of this afternoon's fracas involving the pace-setting P. A. A. crew with the second place Keystone No. 1 array on the Winged Head courts should settle the destiny of the squash bauble, while the probable playoff of two tussles between Keystone A. C. and the Y. M. H. A. in the latter's bailiwick tomorrow will either decide the glove title or toss it into a three-way deadlock.

The racquet chase stands at present with the P. A. A. two and a half matches ahead of the Keystoners. P. A. A. can clinch the trophy beyond possibility of loss by annexing two out of five matches today.

In the handball domain, Y. M. H. A. can remain in the race for honors by grabbing two from the Keystone. There is a discussion as to whether or not these encounters should be awarded to the Bellefielders by default, but the likelihood is that they'll be decided by battle.

HOPPE FLASHES OLD FORM

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Willie Hoppe, who came to the big town nearly 40 years ago to astonish the cuemasters, had the leaders in the world's three-cushion championship wondering today if the former king of the balkline players has returned to his old-time form.

After five games, of which he had won four with only mediocre playing, the 46-year-old former boy wonder, holder at one time or another of every billiard title except the three-cushion crown, cut loose last night with an exhibition of shot making that carried him to victory over 71-year-old Alfredo De Oro, in 28 innings and 41 minutes. The score was 50 to 13.

In going into a three-way tie for second place with the defending champion, Welker Cochran, and Johnny Layton, Hoppe missed in only 10 innings.

Hoppe was on the schedule again today, meeting Tiff Denton, the Kansas City veteran, in the second matinee match. The other afternoon game brought together two players low in the standings, Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia, and Len Kenney, Chicago. At night Bozeman will clash with Allen Hall of Chicago, while Cochran matches strokes with the 1931 titleholder, Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago.

Veteran Rixey, Buc Nemesis, Retires

CINCINNATI, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Eppa Rixey has laid aside his pitcher's glove to quit baseball forever after 21 years in the major leagues.

Rixey is 43. That, and recent illness, made the going tougher and tougher. Doubting that he could stand the pace of another season, he has elected to drop out instead.

With 21 years of service in the major leagues, Rixey had come to be regarded as the dean of big league pitchers, and he was as effective as most of them to the last. Alone of the Reds' pitching crew last year, he turned in more games won than lost. In all his career, he hung up 266 games won as against 251 lost, pitching in 629 in all, fanning 1,350 men and allowing 4,633 hits.

PASTOR RATED FLOOR ACE

Word that he had been selected as a member of the all-time basketball team at Wittenberg College, Springfield, O., was received by Dr. G. E. Swoyer, pastor of the Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, North Side, yesterday.

Dr. Swoyer

Dr. Swoyer was graduated from Wittenberg in 1913, after having won eight letters in varsity competition. Although achieving the greatest heights in basketball, he was one of the mainstays of the Wittenberg football team for three years, and, after graduation, coached football at the Terrill School, in Dallas, Tex.

In his last season as a member of the Wittenberg quint, he chalked up 113 points, while holding the men opposing him to three points, and this despite the fact that some of the biggest universities in the Middle West were on the Wittenberg floor schedule. He was selected as a member of the all-time quint by Coach Keyser, veteran mentor of basketball at the Springfield college.

Sport Vignettes

Times still must be tough when John Hernon threatens to do the publicity for the six-day bicycle race at Duquesne Garden.

Speaking of big fellows for big jobs, West Virginia went out and got itself a Tallman for its new football coach.

Lew Raymond is eyeing Forbes Field for a few big boxing shows this summer. Looking him back in the eye with never a waver is Samuel Waters.

It seems that Johnny Wilson-Joe Chip fight at Motor Square Garden some years ago, with which the Teddy Yarosz-Jimmy Wilson gate of the other night was compared, exceeded $14,000, and not only $12,000. However, they had $5 tops in those days, so the better than $10,000 "take" for Monday's sellout was aces, considering the times.

Other big gates at the Garden, these statistics being by courtesy of J. Hernon, who was manager there in his best days, but now associates with bike riders, were: Jack Zivic and Lew Tendler, a whopper, with many fans turned away; Zivic and Sailor Friedman, $12,338; Pete Latzo and Jimmy Jones, $10,258, and Zivic vs. Cuddy De Marco, $9,572.

This is the time of the year when we annoy college track coaches by asking if their sport is necessary. Only most of them have learned it doesn't pay to get sore about it, because the crack will be repeated a year later, regardless. It's

The Private Papers of a Reporter

Well, as one of the average citizens, or the average Man In The Street, as the saying goes, I am intensely interested, of course, in the current controversy between Col. Lindbergh and the White House . . . Perhaps the smart thing to do in such wars is to avoid any comments—but anybody can do that . . . I still feel that some of those readers were right when they tormented me with letters during the Father Coughlin-Alfred E. Smith argument, in which they said: "Are you yellow? Or why have you dodged discussing this nationally known controversy? Which side are you on—Coughlin or Smith? And why?" . . . And so on . . . But I took a run-out powder, which is the safest route for people like me—who aren't looking for trouble, etc. . . . And this matter between the President and the Colonel is difficult, too . . . Whose side to take? When you like them both and what they stand for? . . . What would I say if the query were put to me—in the barber shop or the office or at home?

All I know is that Mr. Roosevelt is my idea of a President and that Mr. Lindbergh still is an inspiration . . . I have a hunch that the President didn't cancel the air mail contracts unless he had excellent cause. He hasn't fumbled yet, you know . . . But I do not know enough about it to discuss it . . . On the other hand, I consider Lindbergh . . . He gave America glory and America gave him what? . . . Plenty of misery, it seems . . . Of course, the persons who dictated that letter he signed were the ones who were disrespectful to the President—I do not believe Lindbergh would insult Roosevelt . . . I think, too, that some of the papers editorially spanked Lindbergh too hard . . . Is that what happens to a hero when he makes his first mistake, if, that is, Lindbergh's letter was a fo-pah? . . . I think, too, that our President and the Colonel will be reconciled—big men usually do big things . . . It is proverbial that heavy showers do not last long . . . And I found out a long, long time ago that no matter how clean you go into a fight you have to come out a little mussed.

I can't recall where I recently read it. Probably in Gene Fowler's exciting book, "Timber Line" . . . And I may not quote it exactly, but this is what impressed me much . . . Eugene Field, the grand columnist of Denver, who wrote pithy paragraphs, and made audible wisecracks from his 4th row on the aisle seat to actors he disliked, and who was a gay guy, according to his historians—was abused by the press of that day . . . They called him a drunken sot, among other names, and there were commentators who panned his stuff . . . Before he died, however, Field wrote "Little Boy Blue" and other delightful things that still live—and he is now included among the men to remember respectfully . . . But Eugene Field struggled long and wound up poor, never even feeling the gold that poured from the sector in which he slaved and lived, Colorado . . . I hear, too, that Eugene Field was even dispossessed . . . or his mortgage fell due and he couldn't pay it, so they put him out . . . But "The Unsinkable Mrs. Brown" (see Fowler's swell book, "Timber Line"), who started as a barmaid, and wound up with most of the gold mines there—and who was also snubbed socially—bought the home in which Field lived and died—and turned it into a shrine for children . . . Where, I presume, the descendants of Mr. Field's severest critics—now bring their children to pay homage to a man—whose nursery rhymes and poems help make them better humans . . . As Fowler says: "Death corroborated his genius."

The recent line here that letter carriers wore uniforms on which the buttons were made in Germany—and that it would be brought to the attention of Congressman Nesbit of Illinois brings a reply from him . . . It amuses me a little, by the way, to think that no New York Congressman has gone to the bother of wanting to right some wrings—but an Illinois man has requested more details on matters repulsive to many . . . At any rate, Mr. Nesbit investigated the buttons . . . Postmaster General Farley's attention was called to the imported buttons and he welcomed the complaint, instead of resenting it . . . Which, as Mr. Nesbit points out, is exemplary of the spirit of the new deal . . . But this is one on Mr. Nesbit . . . The Stationery Room in the House Office Building was selling considerable foreign made goods to Congressmen . . . In an unguarded moment Congressman Nesbit bought a letter opener and shears which were made in Germany before Hitler . . . Nesbit had the instruments a long time, until he read a Chicago paper's poke about the foreign made goods. It wondered why statesmen didn't buy American made stuff . . . Now Mr. Nesbit has a desk set made in the U. S. A., as have others there, and the House Office Bldg. Stationery Room also has a clean nose . . . Add squelches for a certain type of person: "What kind of a guy is he, anyway?" . . . "Well—his mother has to use binoculars to see him."

Mayor LaGuardia apparently isn't too occupied to read some letters . . . Such as the one from the boy, representing a Bay Ridge baseball team, who wrote him that for years only teams who had some "connection" or a relative who is a politician—got the permits for the better local baseball fields in the various city parks . . . I sent it to the Mayor . . . The boys now him have officiating as their very own influence . . . Of course, this time they too used influence when they wrote—but I think the public will agree that it is about time that even these boys rate a new deal . . . Considering that for so long they took the leavings . . . I groan all over when I meet a fact like this one . . . A Lieutenant of the local snooper police squad in Staten Island the other night, when it was 14 below, turned in three cops . . . Because they tried to keep from freezing to death by pausing in a police booth . . . So they now lose three days' pay each . . . One's tootsies are still frozen and he's in the sick room—but the Lieutenant, who goes looking up cops who try to keep warm, rides around in a heated car.

CURRENT SHOWS :-: 'Hot From Hollywood' Reviews of New Bills :-: MOVIES, STAGE

Revue, Movie Program in Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With a house packed at noon, yesterday, the Stanley management received ample notice that the public will go for stage shows, for there is little doubt that "Artists and Models of 1934," first "flesh" presentation in the Stanley for months and months, is what attracted Mr. Public and his good lady, and some of their family to the theater in such numbers so early in the day.

In honor of the auspicious event, Maestro Dave Broudy had arranged, as an overture for the Stanley orchestra, a medley that opened and closed with "Happy Days Are Here Again," the trimmings including obligatos by the boys, even Dave, himself, obliging with some sweet strains on the fiddle for the benefit of the folks who hadn't seen him for a long time. And they liked it.

"Artists and Models" proved to be an elaborately produced melange of stage pictures, girls, comedy, song and dance. Jans and Whalen and Jimmy Savo had charge of most of the fun effects, Jans and Whalen doing their best in their familiar routine of comedy chatter and dancing in their individual specialty act. Savo, a real clown, when he has a chance to be, was lost in a few scenes that were decidedly off in color and odor. Edith King, once in stock here, did very well a recitative that wasn't worth doing.

Solo dancers were very good and the ensemble stepped with expert precision, especially in a tap number without music in which the perfect unison was most effective. The stage pictures also impressed, including the opening scene with girls grouped as colors on an artist's palette, a number introducing mothers of various nationalities crooning to infants, with a more spectacular climax in grouping and color, and another with girls posing as statuary.

Although some of the stage show was indifferent, the customers got the worth of their money in such parts as were satisfactory, combined with the amusing comedy that was shown as the screen feature. That was "By Candlelight," with Elissa Landi, a maid, and Paul Lukas, a butler, masquerading, respectively, as their mistress and master. The fun reached its height when the master of the butler returned and found the servant entertaining a supposed lady of high rank. He donned the butler's uniform and proceeded to serve the masqueraders as persons in their assumed positions would be served. Nils Asther plays the master.

The bill also included an interesting news reel.

Girls, Midgets In the Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH.

"World's Fair Scandals," satisfying the males in the Pitt this week, might better be termed "World's Fair Scanties," according to one of the fairer sex in the audience at the show's opening yesterday. Ralph Cook, comdian, supplies the continuity in the revue that offers you Texas Guinan's gang going strong, and then changes its tactics to present the cunning Midget Village Follies. Cook, or Cookie, as his partner in laugh-making, Floyd Christie, calls him, cracks wise in his gagging, and he's plenty good as a dancer, too.

Solo steppers of the show, dancing as if they enjoyed it, are Virginia Heavey, blonde toe dancer, and black-haired tapper Celia Blair. Not to be overlooked is Judie Dean, backed by the gang, who does a "Black Moonlight" dance.

The Three St. John Brothers draw merited applause for new acrobatic turns, gain more response than the Guinan Gang, who give one an eyeful in more ways than one.

The Midget Village Follies with their tuneful orchestra, tiny John Lealman amusingly imitating Will Rogers, Elinor Stubins, a vest-pocket edition of Mae West, and Stella Royal, the world's tiniest toe dancer, win admiration in opposite proportion to their size.

"Broken Dreams," movie feature, tells the story of stepmother's problem in winning, and understanding, the son of her husband, Randolph Scott and Martha Sleeper and little Buster Phelps carry the story along.

Two Features In Davis

By RICHARD J. O'DONNELL

If you like music—any kind of music—you should find some to suit your taste in the shows at the Davis and Regent. There are Viennese waltzes, and beer-diluting Bowery ballads, symphonic numbers and cowboy laments. Interspersed, of course, is the inevitable jazz, done up in a bright, modern manner.

You can expect a melody to burst forth at almost any point in either of the two features, "Beloved" and "The Last Round-Up."

"Beloved," starring John Boles and Gloria Stuart, is the story of a symphony and its composer. Opening in Vienna, the picture is interspersed with births, deaths, wars and concerts, as it runs through four generations of the music-minded Haussman family.

Carrying too heavy burden, the film creaks and halts as it moves toward a dramatic conclusion.

Lederer Star In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

If East and West can never meet, it appears that West and North may not get together either. At least Francis Lederer, as Aigo, a great Eskimo hunter—the very essence of the Northland— cannot get very close to Elissa Landi, as "Lady" Joan, a delicate specimen of London's hat-house society in "Man of Two Worlds," in the Warner.

Aigo was willing—nay, anxious, but the Western hot-house flower shrank from the white-heat of this savage from the cold lands.

The screen version of Ainsworth Morgan's saga of two worlds is a tedious affair by the very nature of its story material. Although Aigo, taken to England as a reward for hunting prowess by Sir Basil somebody-or-other, is eager and quick to learn, it was evidently thought necessary by author or director to spend many, many feet of film to teach the mighty hunter a few "white" tricks, including the telling of lies, before he could visit the "other world."

The memory of an Eskimo wife and infant back home does nothing to prevent Aigo from being terribly hurt by the "white" girl's ill-concealed if amused distaste for him. While he "tanks he go home," it is only to die, as far as he is concerned. But fate and his faithful people save him from a snowy grave, and, at the end of the picture, it is suspected that his old passion for hunting and maybe the wife and child may in time heal the mighty scar left on his savage heart by a frail white woman's hand. Forgiving the tedium the role imposes upon him, Francis Lederer is superb.

The remainder of the program is good—Pathe News, two musical short subjects, with Jack Denny and his smooth band, an animated "Merrie Melody," "Pettin' In the Park," and a "World of Sports" feature, "Winter Thrills."

Crises Shown On Screen

Vivid pictures of the great political upheavals in Europe are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with graphic descriptions by the Globe Trotter. There are pictures of the riots in Paris and of the fighting in Vienna.

Exclusive pictures are presented of the mighty Leviathan, America's former queen of the seas, now rotting at her dock in Hoboken, N. J. They show lifeboats uncovered, hull and funnels spotted with rust and disorder everywhere. There are also pictures of the Leviathan of yesterday in her prime.

NOTE—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedule, it is possible some of the subjects of the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Odds and Ends

WE WERE talking about dogs the other night, and somebody remembered a cute dog story. It has to do with Bertram, a young gentleman who is the hero of the tale. The doggie enters later.

Bertram was the same as a great many people. That is to say, he was fond of money—but he wasn't fond enough to work hard to get it.

He had, however, one advantage over those who long to become rich. That advantage was a rich, old grandaunt who had no other relatives. And Bertram was often given to reflecting quite happily that Auntie couldn't live forever.

Accordingly, although he had no great love for the old damsel, he went to work on her.

When Bertram began to hang around, she was barely civil to the man. But he refused to be discouraged. He stuck closer than a rubber bathing suit, and studied the situation from all angles. To everyone else, Auntie was cranky and downright rude. But she always lavished luxuries on the dog and cooed to it in baby talk.

It didn't take long for Bertram to discover that the Pekingese was Auntie's weak spot, aside from her liver. It was a simple case of "love me, love my dog." So Bertram did love the dog— when Auntie was around to see what was going on.

Our hero cuddled that animal. He petted, exercised, fed, fondled, bathed, combed and brushed that Peke. But all, of course, while Auntie was looking. At other times, he took a few well-placed boots at the pooch. But Auntie never knew. She just beamed happily at them both.

At length Auntie kicked off amid no great shedding of tears. While the will was being read, Bertram attempted to squeeze out a few of those tears—but he met with little success. And he put his handkerchief away in a hurry when he heard that Auntie had left the bulk of her fortune to a cat and dog hospital.

But Bertram wasn't forgotten. No, indeed. She left him her most prized possession, which she knew he would appreciate more than anything else because he had become so devoted to it.

She left him the Peke!...

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Feb. 17.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

All this argument over who will carry the mail, and if you tore a sack open here is what you would find, 20 per cent would be chain letters. "Mail this to 10 others. It will bring you good luck." And we spend a half billion a year on education.

Will Rogers

Forty per cent will be asking somebody for an autograph. As I said before, we spend a half billion on education. Ten per cent will be Congressional records (and there is not a house that can't pick up their own kindling). Ten per cent is pamphlets of somebody's scheme of how to solve something.

Ten per cent is bills which won't be paid, so they just as well not send 'em, 10 per cent is newspapers being sent to a place where there is a better paper printed and that's what a boy risks his life with over the mountains every night. Yours, WILL.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By GWYNN

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 17.—There is now no question of the fact that Jeannette McDonald will play opposite Maurice Chevalier in the "Merry Widow." Mr. Chevalier finally broke down and gave his consent to having her in the picture when he was convinced that no one else was available, and while studio officials have wanted Miss McDonald right along, they couldn't do anything about it until Chevalier said "Okay."

* * *

All that has to happen in this industry is for an independent producer to want an unavailable player and bingo, another good picture hits the shelf. Charles R. Rogers is again having difficulty in obtaining the players he wants from Paramount under an agreement they made months ago, and he can't get the right people for the top spots. Right after having to put "Green Gold" away, Rogers was forced to abandon plans he had for making "Nick the Greek" because he wanted George Raft for the title role. But Raft had already been assigned to the next Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin," and directly he finishes in that Raft will take himself abroad for a three-months vacation trip.

* * *

That classic feud among George White, Buddy De Sylva and Lew Brown, which found itself all working on the same lot though not speaking, namely Fox, has resolved itself into a nice big bet amongst the boys who have pooled a lot of money together—winner to take all. And the winner will be determined by the box office receipts their respective musicals will earn. The one whose picture makes the most money wins the bet.

* * *

When Daryl Zanuck signed George Bancroft for the leading role in "Blood Money," it was thought that Bancroft would reestablish himself as a tremendous box office attraction and with that in mind, Twentieth Century purchased the life of P. T. Barnum. However, things didn't turn out that way, and Zanuck has now put in a bid for the loan of Wallace Beery. The picture will not be produced until the fall and in the meantime Gene Fowler is writing the story.

* * *

Jimmy Durante walked over to Raoul Walsh the other day and applied for the role of a spy in "Operator Thirteen," the Marion Davies picture. When Walsh refused, Jimmy said, "Okay; make me a bugler then, and I promise to use my own bugle."

* * *

Jackie Searl and Jackie Cooper, the two kids you liked most of any two kids at one time, will be reunited for one more picture anyway. Jackie Searl was signed this week to play the part of Horace Clay, the second lead in "Peck's Bad Boy," which will star Cooper in the title role.

Graffers March Out With Honors and Overstuffed Pockets

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

These stories of relief graft are certainly nice for the children's hour.

If an ordinary man grabs a bag of plunder he is tabbed by the police. But when a politician featherizes his nest he marches out with full honors of war.

He doesn't have to answer any questions which will degrade himself.

His refusal to chat gets him ten days in the jailhouse. Which degrades nobody.

Looks like the public servant we must fear is the man who accepts the oath of office with his resignation in his pocket.

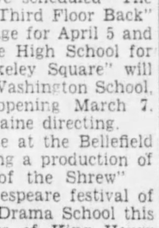
Ali Baba New Juvenile Drama

By GEORGE SEIBEL

A Pittsburgh girl's dramatization of the Arabian Nights will be the next production of a local group that calls itself the Golden Triangle Players and uses the stage of the Twentieth Century Club. "Ali Baba," written by Beatrice Lewis, has three acts and 40 thieves, and will be played next Saturday, February 24, at 10 a. m. Vincent Maselli will be Ali Baba and Nell Moore Sprowls is Harida, which sounds like a princess. Colorful oriental scenery by those famous Levantine travelers, Jack Woolley and Kendall Power, should provide atmosphere and background for all the little jinns and kalenders that take Saturday morning off.



Mr. Seibel

During the past week there have been several notable productions by local talent — The Masquers at Calvary Parish presenting "Here Today," Carl Cass' Pitt Players in "Children of the Moon" and the colored drama clubs uniting in a Negro Passion Play in Schenley High School.

Now the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players also are starting up a series of fresh activities. Frances Hodgson Burnett's popular children's play, "Racketty-Packetty House," will be put on by their youngest dramatic group Sunday evening, February 25, and Sarah C. Pettit's drama of heredity, "The Guest," has been announced for two evenings, February 27 and 28. Mrs. Pettit, a member of the Drama League directorate, is no novice, having written 23 long and short plays.

The well-known Dracomtra Players, directed by Ward Ewalt, are to play "The Devil" on March 1 and 2 in Washington School, Mt. Lebanon, while the Epworthian Players have scheduled "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" on the same stage for April 5 and in Westinghouse High School for April 6. "Berkeley Square" will be seen at the Washington School, Mt. Lebanon, opening March 7, with Edward Blaine directing.

The Playhouse at the Bellefield "Y" is rehearsing a production of "The Taming of the Shrew"

For the Shakespeare festival of Carnegie Tech Drama School this year both parts of King Henry IV" will be played with a promising new Falstaff. But even earlier the annual Greek play will be put on—this time the "Medea" of Euripides.

Cab Calloway 'Sings Skat' In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

Cab Calloway and his orchestra, in an hour of Harlem hi-de-ho, head the new bill in the Penn. Leitha Hill, a "hot" singer; Elma Turner, a tap dancer; the Three Dukes, who dance, and the Five Percolators, who both step and harmonize, lend able assistance, but the creator of Minnie the Moocher and Smoky Joe never leaves the center of the stage.

Cab's style seems to have changed lately, and to this admirer he was a bit of a disappointment yesterday. While clowning always was a big part of his act, it has now been magnified beyond all proper proportions.

One used to put up with it for the sake of the music. Now that the music has been definitely relegated to the background while Cab struts and wiggles and attempts comedy that is usually in pretty bad taste, it all becomes a little wearisome.

Cab used to give "Stardust," that grandest of all modern tunes, an interpretation that was hardly short of classic. Yesterday he played "Stardust" by request, but what a difference! It was only a burlesque, a vehicle for the most repellant and "barbaric yawps" of the entire program.

It must be said in all fairness that large portions of yesterday's audiences seemed to enjoy Cab as heartily as ever, even to the point of joining lustily in the "skat-singing" responses of the antiphonal "Minnie."

The picture is called "This Side of Heaven." In it, Lionel Barrymore continues his adventures as the harassed old father of a family who has clerked faithfully all his life for a big concern and finds himself in a jam as evening shadows fall. He is Kringelein with a different makeup, the hero of "Looking Forward" transplanted in America. This time he tries suicide, but is saved and exonerated of embezzling the firm's funds.

Mayor McNair's lecture on "Economic Rent," complete with crude pictures and cartoons, is included on the bill.

RAILWAY STEEL PURCHASING EXPANDS

By B. E. V. LUTY.

The volume of railroad buying has begun to reach sizable proportions, as the Pennsylvania Railroad was reported this week buying 72,000 tons of steel products, a portion of the tonnage required for the 7,000 freight cars the system is building in its own shops. Orders will be placed soon for about 175,000 tons needed for the 12,725 cars the Van Swearingen lines recently allocated, and rail buying is looking up. Railroad buying will represent an addition to present steel mill activity, particularly in the Pittsburgh district. To date scarcely any railroad steel has been produced.

Production of steel ingots this week was officially forecast at 39.9 per cent, but mills have generally been running above their schedules and actual output in the week may be estimated at not less than 41 per cent, just one-half more than the average rate in November, the low month since last April.

An interesting feature of the situation, sometimes overlooked, is the quiet manner in which miscellaneous demand for steel has increased. Outside of automobile business, the size of which may easily be overestimated, and railroad buying, which has not yet materially affected steel production, the entire steel market appears rather dull than otherwise. This feature needs to be watched, the indication being that miscellaneous buying has further and important potentialities.

AUTO OUTPUT RISING

The automobile industry is doing very well compared with one year or two years ago, more than doubling its production, but not at all well compared with 1929. In the three biggest months of that year, March, April and May, automobile production averaged 640,000 units a month. This month is now forecast at 270,000 and next month at above 325,000. The industry still has some stocks of steel, accumulated last September and October, but since the first of the year have been at a rate of more than 20,000 gross tons a month, fully equal to the average of the best years.

Last large sales of heavy melting steel scrap, about a fortnight ago, were at $13.50 but the market is now regarded as quotable at $14, equal to the high held for a few weeks last summer.

STOCK MARKET RIDES MORE EVEN KEEL

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Initial irregularity in stocks gave way to a better price level as dealings went into the second hour today. Trading was quiet, but broadened somewhat on the improvement. Steel shares continued to attract demand. Oils were steady.

A few isolated soft spots included United Aircraft and American Commercial Alcohol, off 1 and 2 points, respectively. Advances of around a point or more were registered by Crucible Steel, Auburn and Howe Sound. Standard Oil of New Jersey, New York Central, United States Smelting, American Can, Republic Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors and Montgomery Ward were steady to fractionally higher.

In early dealings the British pound was up 3/8 of a cent at $5.09 3/8, but the French franc was slightly lower at 6.52 3/4 cents.

The effect on financial markets of the rapid approach of the dollar toward its new parity with the French currency was being debated in brokerage circles. Only recently the franc was at a discount of more than 7 per cent, whereas at today's opening rate of the French unit the discount was only slightly above 1 per cent.

With the huge amount of gold being bought abroad for the Treasury, bankers express much wonder that the dollar has not already been forced down to parity against all foreign exchanges. Around $60,000,000 of gold has been shipped into this country since the devaluation decree and it is expected in some quarters that the total this month may reach $300,000,000. Except for America's gold loss in 1931, there is no record of such a comparable shifting of monetary gold stocks.

In line with the high hopes of "something" further being done for silver, traders heard reports that the adoption of the proposed copper code would be a matter of only a few days after hearings start in Washington on February 27. While the code affects labor mainly, it provides that members may enter into agreements regarding production, quotas, sales and similar items.

AUSTRIA CENTER OF WAR PERIL, KNICKERBOCKER SAYS

POWERS TO KEEP PEACE UNLESS NAZIS ACT

and the question, "Will War Come?" is referred again to this unhappy city. Her domestic discords have been stilled for the moment in grave criticism of her civil war. Housewives in hundreds of Viennese homes are sweeping out debris left by high explosive shells.

Around the great Engelshof, housing 2,000 workers families, police stood with bayoneted rifles aimed at windows while their comrades with hand grenades searched the building for hidden weapons. This was a vast cleaning operation of police, and it was so peaceful that the commanding officer allowed us to accompany the searching parties.

Yet the weapons that threaten the peace of Europe are not the bayonets around the Austrian houses, but the rifles pointed at her border from abroad. If intervention comes, war is possible. Whether intervention is likely, therefore, is a question which concerns every inhabitant of the Western world, for Europe is convinced that no war today can be localized, not even to this continent.

The civil war here, its bloodshed, and the destruction of the Socialist party have changed some important facts in the calculation as to whether intervention will come, and hence in the calculation as to whether war will come.

DOLLFUSS DOOM SEEN

War-scared observers reason that Chancellor Dollfuss is now doomed. If he falls, the Nazis will come. If the Nazis come, intervention will come, and thence, most probably, war.

But is Dollfuss doomed? This man has set up today what uncritical commentators call a Fascist regime. If it were truly a Fascist regime, the prognosis on Dollfuss would be that he is going to remain in power indefinitely, and that hence none of the dreadful things prophesized to follow his fall would happen, because the form of [illegible] called Fascist in Italy [illegible] National Socialist in Germany and Bolshevik in Russia, [illegible]sentially alike in their political organization, has proved the most durable of all forms of dictatorship.

But is the Dollfuss regime Fascist? The chief elements of durable power under Fascism are:

2—A party army equally devoted to its chief.

3—Absolute control of the press and all other avenues of public information.

4—Support of youth, and such complete control of education that the younger population automatically grows up Fascist.

Dollfuss, however, has no Fascist party. His own party of Christian Socialists is in the progress of at least a moral dissolution. He has the temporary use of party arms—the Heimwehr—but it is loyal in the first place not to him, but to its chief, Prince Starhemberg, and its assistant chief, Major Emil Fey, vice chancellor. All the youth of the country are Nazis.

So of all the principal elements of Fascist power, Dollfuss today has only command of the authority over the regular army is not characteristic of a Fascist regime in its beginnings. Not in Russia, Italy or Germany did the regular army play a deciding role when the moment came for revolution.

Therefore it probably can be argued that the Dollfuss regime has almost none of the elements of strength of Fascism, that it is an individual dictatorship based on a constantly narrowing popular support, that he has been weakened by the war against the Socialists, and that the Nazis have been strengthened by their removal. But, granted that he fall, is intervention probable from abroad?

MUSSOLINI WANTS PEACE

The powers that come into the question of intervention are, in the order of their interest in Austrian independence, Czechoslovakia, Italy, France, England, Jugoslavia and Germany.

Czechoslovakia has given strong evidence she will never intervene. The Czech democracy was the strongest foreign supporter of the Austrian democracy. They were convinced that every shot Dollfuss fired at the Socialists here was a shot for the Nazis. But the Czechs watched Austrian democracy go down under artillery fire, and did not move.

Italy has extended its threat. It has moved troops toward the Brenner. But if there is any man in Europe today who wants to avoid war, it is Mussolini. He knows better than most that if he moves troops into Austria, the Jugoslavs will move their troops in also. And if Italian and Jugoslav troops stand within marching distance of one another on foreign soil the slightest incident could set off an explosion that could shatter the continent.

FRANCE PACIFIC

France has shown the most positive sign that peace at any price is her slogan, at least for the moment. France, everyone agrees, will take no individual initiative to preserve Austrian independence.

Joint action could only come with the help of England. England today is ruled by a cabinet whose Prime Minister is in failing health and whose first concern is to avoid complications on the continent.

Jugoslavia is a member of the little entente, and therefore is formally bound to oppose the acquisition of Austria by Germany. But it is known from unimpeachable sources that Jugoslavia secretly desires Austria to go Nazi because Jugoslavia thinks a Germany on the Italian border would be a healthy hindrance to Italian designs against Jugoslavia.

There is only left Germany. All signs point to the probability Hitler believes the Austrian pigeon will fly into his mouth all nicely broiled and ready to eat, as the Germans say. He sees no necessity to shoulder his gun and go hunting for game that is preparing to leap into his frying pan.

He too knows that sending German or Austrian storm troops from Germany into Austria would be one that that could force Italy to make good her threat and march.

All of the interested powers have made threats. Threats cost little. But the final conclusion is that unless the Germans march, nobody will march. If nobody marches, war over Austria will not come.

PRINCE ERNST RUDIGER VON STARHEMBERG CHANCELLOR ENGELBERT DOLLFUSS

DR. DOLLFUSS AND HIS LOYAL ALLY IN VIENNA: THE CHIEF OF THE HEIMWEHR TROOPS

FASCISTS GAIN IN AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Austrian Fascists scored big gains in their drive to dominate the government today with the elevation of another leader to a cabinet post and the ousting of thousands of Socialists from public office.

They won, too, in Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' failure to heed the demand of his own Christian Social party that Parliament be reconvened at once.

Emphasizing the ascendancy of the Fascist influence, Under-Secretary Neustaedter-Stuermer, member of the Fascist Heimwehr, or home guard, has been appointed minister of social welfare.

The cabinet accelerated its general anti-Socialist campaign by declaring null and void the position and prerogatives of every official elected on that party's ticket.

GERMANY WARNED

PARIS, Feb. 17.—(AP.)—Three great powers of Europe—England, France and Italy—drafted today, reliable reports said, warning to Germany to keep her hands off Austria.

The joint declaration will be addressed to the world at large, the understanding here is. It is a movement on the part of the three powers intended to preserve Austria's independence.

EVANS RELATES CANADA SALES TAX SUCCESS

Thirteen years ago, Canada, faced with an appalling financial situation as a result of the World War, adopted a sales tax and "painlessly" derived at the rate of 1 per cent, 15 million dollars in national revenue the first year, according to Raymond D. Evans, assistant to the potentate of Syria Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. of Western Pennsylvania and former assistant United States district attorney.

In a brief discussion of the Canadian manufacturers' sales tax system and what it would do for the United States in its present financial emergency, Mr. Evans said over WCAE last night:

"At the end of four years, with the aid of the sales tax, Canada licked her financial bogy man, with an average annual revenue yield of more than 100 million dollars.

"On this basis, since the population of the United States is 12 times that of Canada, it could be assumed that Canada's maximum sales tax of 6 per cent would produce in excess of a billion dollars annually if it were applied to the United States."

An admirable feature of the sales tax as it has worked out in Canada is that it stands up well under adverse conditions, Mr. Evans continued. He said:

"While the income tax in Canada declined from 71 million dollars in 1931 to 61 million in 1932, the sales tax increased from 20 million in 1931 to 42 million in 1932. This year the advance will be to 62 million dollars."

Mr. Evans pointed out as significant that the National Association of Manufacturers, who vigorously opposed the manufacturers' sales tax when it was first suggested some years ago as an equitable panacea for steadily shrinking national revenue from income taxation sources, have made a right about face and today constitute one of its staunchest supporters.

Summing up his talk, Mr. Evans said:

It appears that under the manufacturers' sales tax program, taxation is equitable, evasion is impossible; the tax is paid by the citizen in small amounts distributed throughout the year, rather than a large sum annually; returns can be computed easily and accurately and sufficient and ample national revenue produced."

Austrian Protest Speakers Chosen

Howard Woodmansee will represent the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union in a protest of the recent killing of Austrian workers and their families, and the destruction of the trade unions and the Socialist movement, at a meeting in Moose Temple Monday. Other speakers will be Robert Lieberman, executive chairman of the Unemployed Citizens' League of Allegheny County; Jacob Margolis, labor attorney; Milton Weisberg, state secretary of the Young People's Socialist League, and Sarah Limbach, state secretary of the Socialist party of Pennsylvania.

Convicts Dare Sharks, Vampires To Escape Dreaded Devil's Island

Monstrous Monkeys, Poisonous Snakes Inhabit Swamps

By GORDON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER XVI.

ST. LAURENT DE MARONI, French Guiana.—Three of the 12 Devil's Island convict colonies are on islands 27 miles from shore. Those islands are surrounded by rough shark-filled seas. No ship other than a French one is allowed within two miles of the cliffs and tide currents there run faster than anywhere else on the South American coast.

Most of the other penitentiaries are in swamp land and jungle aswarm with deadly mosquitoes, vampire bats, army ants, bushmaster snakes, poisonous centipedes, boa constrictors, spider crabs, jaguars and a breed of bloodthirsty monkeys that roar like lions.

The whole country is studded with sink holes of quicksand and patrolled by bush Indians know as human bloodhounds. Their job is tracking down escaped convicts and their mercy about equal to that of a king cobra.

Yet more convicts escape from Devil's Island than from any other penitentiary in the world!

More than 250 got away this year, of whom only 22 have been recaptured and thrown into the blockhouse where they now await banishment to the dungeons of death.

Robbing a Jail

A killer named Roux not only made a clean break, but on the theory that he had all to win and nothing to lose he robbed the penitentiary office of every franc it held and vanished.

Dozens are gone weeks, or even months, before they are missed!

No sirens moan, no gongs boom or telegraph instruments click when a man makes a break. No penitentiary search parties ever set out with dogs and lights and jungle beaters to round up deserters. The routine rewards running from 50 cents to $3 are posted, the human blood hounds are given names and numbers and the search goes quietly and cruelly on.

So many escaped men are said to be at large in the fever filled interior of French Guiana that it has recently been put under military law. Just recently four prospectors panning for gold in an inland stream were throttled and slain by escaped prisoners.

One of these desperadoes was marched back in chains and locked in the death tower from where he will soon be paraded and publicly guillotined.

This gruesome, yet highly technical job, will be done, as in Siam, by a brother in crime who gets a bonus for a one stroke death and wears silk breeches and a cocked hat.

Killer of Killers

The island's killer of killers has held his job since 1926 and was not only personally selected by his first victim—who had been executioner before him—but actually taught the correct angle for draping a head and the artistic method of tripping the triangular death blade.

That week a new batch of Parisian riffraff had come to camp. No sooner had the guards withdrawn, as they always do at night, than the woolly chested gorillas of the dormitories walked among these shells of men demanding money, smokes and anything else they happened to see or think up.

For one thing, the colonel-in-chief of the dormitory wanted a new batman. Yes a batman no less; for the aces of the convict camps have fags to do their bidding no less than in English schools and military colleges.

The executioner, of course, was an ace. He was treated with the respect that Capone would command. He got first choice. But the youth he selected had other ideas and his full share of defiance. There was a fight at once; a fight with knives. The newcomer was slain. Generally in such case no arrest is made. The code of the dormitories is the code of gangland; death to the squealer. But in this case the guards learned who had done the killing and he was paraded and doomed at once.

Chant of Death

That night the weirdest and spookiest chant to ever fall on human ears moaned out to sea as the tide fell. It is the death anthem of the domed. I can't give you the French for it but it goes something like this:

"We are the doomed of France. To-night we live. To-morrow one of us will die. To-night then, is ours. Let us do something; do something; do something."

At noon next day drum calls echoed across the square. Soldiers lined up. A convict put a last dab of oil to the trip lever of the guillotine shining in the sun. Six hundred convicts were paraded. The executioner, freshly shaved and formally tailored stood teetering on his toes.

A guard snapped:

"Convicts kneel. Hats off."

Six hundred floppy grey straws were whipped off, 1,200 eyes watched in horror.

The guard again commanded:

"Heads bowed."

But nobody bowed their heads. They still looked in grim fascination as the former executioner stepped forward, shook off his shackles, felt the tip of the great knife and watched with technical interest while it was pulled up. He asked his successor:

"Nervous?"

"Yes; I hate to do this. I'd rather . . ."

"Forget it, and take your time. You only bungle a job when you hurry. See, now, watch; I place the head so . . ."

He draped himself on the tilted bench and started sliding forward like a log in a saw mill, continuing:

"You make sure I slide forward so . . . but not too far see? That hits on the shoulders. But this way see? Only the neck in the groove. Are you ready? All right—we go."

The drums rattled in a long fast crescendo. The great knife fell in silent oiled grooves, and the shaved head rolled into the basket. Some of the convicts kneeling in the sun, crossed themselves passionately, one or two sobbed, a few cursed.

The guard yapped:

"Attention! About turn."

The six hundred wheeled woodenly about and shuffled off to barracks. The drums still rattled a barage of revenge.

All that will be repeated next week when a jungle wild man provides the thirty-eighth bonus to the killer who has yet to soil his silk trousers with blood.

But it won't stop dormitory killings and it won't stop attempts at escape. Anyhow officials don't expect it will.

"A leopard cannot change his spots. Of those men soon to go underground 19 have previously tried to break away."

"Alone?"

"No, most of them started in groups of six or seven. The other died of fever or starvation. They were devoured by the sharks or maybe they were murdered."

"But why is such slackness permitted in letting them go? If France feels that convicts should come here why let 800 of them drift about ungarded? Why let two or three get away every day? I'm told that assisting men to escape is an organized and recognized industry now; an industry run by men who have themselves escaped."

"It may be true. We hear that even convicts in uniform carry on business arrangements toward escape of other convicts, but the jungle and the sea are the natural guardians, my friend. To be sure three, four or maybe five hundred get away. Most of them come back to us. Those who do not, what of them?"

What of Their Future?

"I don't know. They probably lead clean lives from that day on."

"Nonsense; you too sound like a social worker, a reformer, a sob sister. Do you know that of 2,500 men who have got away from here in 25 years, less than eight have ever turned up in the hands of the police again? Yet a leopard cannot change his spots. Once a criminal, always a criminal."

"Well, where are the rest?"

"Dead. The sharks have fed on them. The quicksands have swallowed them up. The beasts of the jungle have torn them to pieces. Occasionally we hear fantastic tales of bands of wild men back in the jungles. Wild men who act and live and look like medieval savages. Ex-convicts. But that's all delirium. It is no exaggeration to say that 90 per cent who make the break are dead men within a month. If they got clean away we would take steps to stop it. But now . . ."

He shrugged and puffed his cigaret deeply:

"Well, it costs less when they are gone."

Actor Almost Hanged by Mistake

Maybe you haven't heard of Bill Pringle.

Bill is a radio actor, and his claim to fame at the moment lies in the fact that he's the only man to be found in his profession who knows how to hang himself—histrionically.

In last night's re-enactment of the week's news, Pringle took the role of Verne Sankey, the kidnaper, who committed suicide in his cell, by executing himself with a necktie.

Nobody knew, while the show was being rehearsed just what noises a man hanging makes. That is, nobody but Pringle.

"I know," Pringle volunteered, "because once, I was hanged."

Actually, Bill was nearly hanged. It was while he was trouping with a road company. He played the villain, and in the last act they hanged him as a horsethief.

Two hooks, concealed in his coat, were part of the props but one night they broke, and Pringle was really jerked from his feet by the noose, and was out for several hours. He remembered distinctly the sounds he made on that occasion, and reproduced them last night.

Kate Smith will be back on CBS in Tuesday and Thursday night spots, for an insurance company in six weeks.

Between her song numbers, nice men will tell the audience how to avoid figuring in accidents.

* * *

"The Kingfish" (not Amos 'n' Andy's lodge leader, but Hooey Long in the flesh), goes radio from Washington, February 23, and will speak over a network for a half-hour, on "Every Man a King." It's a plug for his recent book.

* * *

Hiroshi Saito, the new Japanese ambassador, takes the air from Washington tonight via NBC, for his first public address.

He will be heard at 6:30. The military tension throughout the world, say the heralds of this address, makes Mr. Saito's talk of special interest and importance.

Don Bestor has signed for 26 more weeks with his candy broadcast.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Eddie Peyton's orchestra plays a waltz medley as the feature of the 11:30 Frivolities.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"On the way up here I wondered what my own wife does with the trash, and I recalled that I have often seen her slip down in the cellar, throw it into the furnace and burn it," said Anderson.

"You're wrong there, Inspector," interrupted Carroll, "I know that Hurley and Katz and myself went over this cellar and we thought of that and looked into the furnace. There were a lot of ashes there but no pieces of paper."

"I know," said Anderson. "But you were looking for paper. I want only one scrap—just one word in a certain handwriting. Then I shall know that I am correct. Whatever the risk, I want to look in that furnace now."

He rose to his feet and took off his coat. In this, he carefully wrapped his flashlight.

"I'll do it alone," he said. "You boys listen and call me at the first sound."

We heard him go to the furnace and then we had a glimpse of the interior as the light illuminated it.

Anderson had picked up a short poker and we could hear him moving it around, but scarcely making a sound as he did so.

Finds Name

Then we heard him draw in his breath sharply and, for a brief minute, I saw the light focussed on something which he held in his hand.

"Goodness! I'm right! I'm right!" we heard him say and then he returned to us.

"Hear anything?" he asked anxiously.

"Not a sound. What did you find?" we begged him.

"The one name in all the world that I wanted to find. The man whom I suspected signed his name to the note that he wrote Mrs. Paige that day. I have that very piece. Maybe a closer examination will give us the rest but I don't think so. This scrap had been blown up and had lodged on the side of the furnace near the top where it escaped the flames."

"Who is it?" I cried in excitement.

"I'll tell you after while," whispered Anderson. "I may be wrong. I am wrong unless this particular man comes to get the globe. Let's see what happens first."

I subsided for I knew the Inspector's unwillingness to ever give out his surmises or theories until he had been proven right or wrong.

But I wondered. Who had signed that letter?

Was it Robert Cleveland?

Or Randolph Paige?

Or someone of whom we had never heard?

Uncomfortable Place

Have you ever spent a night in a coal bin? If you haven't, don't try it.

Fortunately for us the Paige coal supply for the winter had not been entirely put in and the rather small amount of it consisted of hard coal. It was small and although our slightest movement sent it tumbling and rattling, it shifted easily to accommodate our bodies.

We all wore overcoats, but the cellar's dampness and chill began to penetrate after only a short time. In addition to my cramped position and cold, my head began to throb. For the first time since I had awakened that morning, I had stopped to rest and reflect, and I realized how severely the fracas of the night before had affected me.

For a while we talked in muffled undertones. Dickey was keen on smoking but the inspector vetoed this with decision. Obviously he knew the shrewdness of the man with whom he had to deal.

"Talk if you want to, boys," he said. "But make your voices low. I think nothing will happen for a couple of hours. If you hear the slightest sound, stop instantly. Carroll, did you lock the upstairs window?"

"Yes, sir, and I followed all your other directions. The rest of the house is securely locked, all doors and windows."

"Why's that?" I asked with interest.

"Because this man is desperate and cunning," answered Anderson. "And intelligent. He wants that electric bulb, but he's not going to walk into any trap. He will jimmy a window or a door and come in, but his first act will be to see if there is any possibility that anyone else has preceded him. The first thing he will do when he comes to this cellar will be to search it before he goes anywhere near that light."

I shivered. That didn't sound so good to me. A desperate killer, armed and on his feet hunting around the basement in search of us stretched out in full view in the coal bin! Anderson, I knew, was only an indifferent shot, Carroll was a cracker-jack, but I had fired a pistol (accidentally) once in my life.

"That's why I wanted you along, Kay," said Anderson seriously. "When you assured me that you were a dead shot, I knew that you were the man we needed."

Expects Resistance

I peered at him in the darkness trying to determine if he was joking.

"I guess we'll nab him as soon as he reaches the cellar, eh?" I suggested hopefully.

"Indeed, no," replied Anderson. "And you boys must remember this very carefully. Unless we are discovered and have to fight for our lives, you are not to fire until I flash my electric torch. I want to catch this murderer in the very act of destroying the evidence against him. When his hand is on that bulb, we will capture him and not before.

"And remember this: do not shoot unless it is positively necessary. But when I give the order 'Hands Up!' if he does not obey, you, Carroll, must fire instantly. Fire to kill or cripple, too, because he will kill us all unmercifully. If he does not surrender, it will be his life or ours—unless I am entirely mistaken in my guess."

"You know who it is?" we both asked.

"Yes," repeated Anderson for the second time. "I do. But it's not going to mean very much unless he comes out here tonight and we catch him redhanded in the act of stealing that bulb. Then we have him."

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A nice rest at home means a flattering negligee. One new model in deep purple velvet has surplice bands on the bodice of fuchsia colored satin. The sash is also of the satin.

Three into one tells the story of a new muff. Fashioned of velvet, leather or woolen, it conceals a handbag in its interior, also a watch, which shows through a cut-out in the muff.

JUNIOR PATROL

There is an excellent exhibition of paintings and sculpture at the Carnegie Museum, now fellows!

Are any of our Junior Patrol members interested in painting and sculpture? Well, whether you are or not you will probably like to see the exhibit. It is being shown by the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

The other day we sent badges and cards to 33 members, all from one school. Here is the letter Robert Link, of R. F. D. No. 1, Oakdale, wrote:

"Enclosed find 33 coupons. Our teacher has given us permission to have our meeting at school. Our meetings will not disturb our school work because they will be held at noon between 12 and 1. We have decided to have our meetings Monday, Wednesday and Friday. And we would appreciate any suggestions you have to make regarding our club."

Fine and dandy, Robert. Of course, we hope you will organize your club and elect a captain and a lieutenant to write letters and keep the minutes of each meeting. Just as soon as your captain is elected, write and tell us who he is and we will send him or her an armband. We hope your teacher will write to us, too, and tell us how the club is getting along.

Some of the things other clubs are doing are to keep a scrap book and to play games together. In the scrap book you can paste interesting things and pictures. You can cut stories and poems, and pictures out of magazines and papers and then divide your scrap books among the members.

They are easily made from pieces of blank paper, and tied together with ribbons or metal clips. For instance, one boy can keep a book showing pictures of nothing but houses and buildings. And a girl can keep a book showing all kinds of dresses and costumes.

And another girl can keep a book showing all kinds of furniture. And automobiles, and trees, and birds, and animals, and portraits of interesting people. Underneath each picture, you should write what it is and the date.

Then, of course, a book full of stories, poems and interesting little paragraphs is interesting to read. Many members will want to work on this kind of a book. At your meetings you can clip out the things from the magazines and newspapers and distribute them around to be put in the right books. You will be surprised what beautiful, interesting books you can make. And maybe you will want to write and draw in them yourselves.

LOUIS XIV DINING WITH MOLIERE, FATHER OF FRENCH COMEDY

This despotic king protected and welcomed great artists and poets. Corneille, Racine, Moliere, etc., were his frequent guests. Louis became king at 5 (1643). Mazarin, chief minister of his mother, regent, controlled the affairs of France.

Louis' reign began with a firmly established government. Gifted to pick able advisers, French national life, industry, commerce, military and political power grew to unknown heights.

Zeal for expansion involved Louis XIV in wars. Successful for many years at the cost of Spain, Netherlands, etc., his fortune changed with his defeat at La Hogue (1692), followed by other adversities documented by the Treaty of Ryswick (1697), taking some of his conquests.

BATTLE OF BULL RUN (JULY 21, 1861)

The first important battle of the Civil War was disastrous for the North. The Union Gen. McDowell was defeated by Confederate Gens. Johnston and Beauregard, who threatened Washington, D. C. Gen. McClellan meanwhile wrested West Virginia from the Confederates, earning the chief command of the Potomac Army. The remainder of 1861 was spent mainly in preparations. Both Federal and Confederate Congresses called for enlistments. The border states between North and South were Kansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland. (U. S. History)

COAL GAS, DESTRUCTIVE DISTILLATE OF COAL

By heating bituminous coal in closed retorts (above) gas—called coal gas—is liberated; coke (c. 80% carbon, 20% ash) and gas carbon (pure amorph carbon on hot walls of retorts) remain. Ammoniacal liquor and tar are separated from raw coal gas by cooling and washing. 2,000 lbs. (1 ton) bituminous coal yields about 10,000 cu. ft. coal gas, 1,400 lbs. coke, 20 gallon ammoniacal liquor, 120 lbs. tar and a varying amount of gas carbon.

Average composition of purified coal gas: Hydrogen (I) 43-55%; methane (CH4) 25-35%; carbon monoxide (CO poisonous), 4-11%; (these are "diluents" heat producing); olefines, acetylene (C2H2), benzene (C6H6) 2.5-5% (illuminants); nitrogen (N), (from air leakage), 2-12%, carbon dioxide (CO2) 0-3%; oxygen (O) 0-1.5% (impurities). Purifying removes: NH3, HCN, H2S, CS2.

FOREST LIFE—EXAMPLE OF BALANCE IN NATURE

Above: Diagram of food relations in a forest. Arrows point to animal doing the eating. A forest is not merely a collection of trees, but a community of living things—trees, shrubs, grasses, mosses, ferns, flowering plants, insects, birds and other animals. The interrelations of these offers interesting study.

LITTLE DORRIT, ARTHUR, HER HUSBAND, LEAVING CHURCH

Amy, called Little Dorrit by all the people of the prison, where her father has been many years, tries in vain to guide her brother, Tim, by finding him jobs and paying his debts. He also is imprisoned. Mr. Pancks, a collector, traces the elder Dorrit as heir of an unclaimed fortune. The Dorrits are liberated and start a "fashionable" life, traveling in Italy and—except pure and self-denying Amy—become arrogant, extravagant. Mr. Dorrit dies in Rome. His wealth, intrusted to Mr. Merdle for investment, vanishes; the embezzler kills himself. Arthur Clennam, Amy's admirer, is ruined also and imprisoned. The clouds are lifted when Arthur's former partner effects his release, taking him again into partnership. He leads Amy to the altar. (English Literature)

CROSS SECTION OF TYPICAL NERVE

(F-F) separate nerve fibers (axons) are bound together in bundles by the perineurium (P-P), which in turn is held by general connective tissue, epineurium (E-E). Arteries (A), veins (V) and lymphatics (L) in epineurium provide for nutrition of nerve.

Nerve impulse set up by stimulus is a spreading wave of change in metabolism or chemistry within the neuron (nerve cell) accompanied by release of chemical and electrical energy.

The Better Half and the Other Half

Discovery of the other half of the Cullinan diamond resulted in some remarks from the wife:

"It weighs three pounds and they call it half a diamond."

"Dearie, why don't you buy me one like that?"

"It would make a nice bar pin. Oh, you don't want me to brooch the subject?"

"Three hundred and some carats. Wow!"

"They can keep the 300 and I'll take the some."

"Oh, you don't find your diamonds, eh? You got to buy them?"

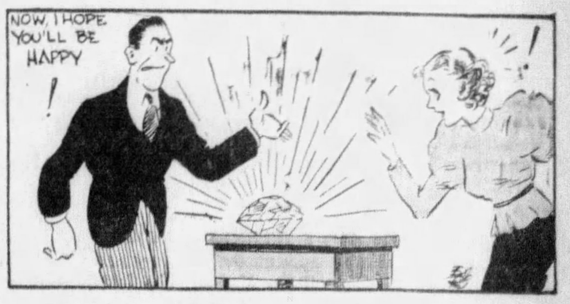
"Well, why don't you?"

"You gave me a splinter for my engagement ring."

"It weighs five-tenths of a carat."

"Why, don't you find the other half of that?"

"How is it when I'm talking you always like the radio?"



"Now, you closed it off."

"Oh, the man was discussing the Cullinan diamond?"

"What's my birth stone?"

"I think it must be a meteor. Oh, you're hoping a three-ton one will fall in my lap?"

"Well, Mrs. Cullinan must be very happy to get the other half of her stone. They tell me the Cullinans used to quarrel dreadfully over it."

"You'll buy me a diamond? What?"

"Oh, I get it. If I find a half a diamond you'll go out and find the other half."

"Where you come from they slap back? Listen, honey, when I smack them banjo music comes out of their ears."

"Yes, my birthday is September 25. Certainly you can go to Africa and look."

"And when you get there I want you to look better than you did in America."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Take pride in the manner in which you walk. Miss Beauty Hunter. It is no trick to "walk in splendor like the night," to sport a carriage that suggests self-respect. Don't crawl up into your coat collar, contract the chest, let the back bend forward. Don't swing the hips. Come down on the ball of the foot and the heel, retaining perfect balance of the body.

Brittle finger nails are supposed to be caused by diet deficiency. Drink milk, spread plenty of butter on your bread, use olive oil freely on salads. At night touch each nail with cuticle cream. If that cosmetic is not in the beauty kit, apply olive oil. Rub it well into the flesh at the base of the nail. Avoid harsh soaps, keep hands out of water that is very hot or very cold.

Here is a suggestion to the candidate for slenderness. Write down a record of food consumed for three days. No cheating, mind you. Be truthful. From that time on reduce starches, sweets and fats to one-third the amount. That will mean that weight will drop one or two pounds a week. Green salads, lean meats, poultry, fruit, vegetables that grow above ground won't add an ounce.

Formula for cosmetic jelly to keep hands smooth and white: Soak 60 grains of whole gum tragacanth in 14 ounces of rosewater for three days, add one ounce of alcohol, one ounce of glycerine, a few drops of the favorite perfume. Disappears a few minutes after application. Inexpensive and cannot be a failure. Easy.

The Unbalanced Budget

The City's Financial Condition Calls for Closer Attention to Business By Mayor McNair.

Instead of meddling in the affairs of the Board of Adjustment, which are not part of his business, Mayor William N. McNair would do well to apply himself diligently to the extrication of the city from the financial mire into which it is rapidly sinking. The budget is unbalanced; appropriations exceed revenue by two million dollars. Unless this condition is remedied, Councilman William A. Magee predicts serious trouble by September.

Because of Mayor McNair's pompous order to the Board of Adjustment to "forget the law," as he would "take care of the courts," he has been likened to Louis XIV, "the grand monarch," who said, "I am the state." By his absorption in the single tax and other visionary schemes at a time when Pittsburgh's deficit steadily mounts he also reminds us of another monarch—the Emperor Nero, who fiddled as Rome burned.

The more the city's financial plight is contem- plated, the more desirable appears the economy and efficiency survey proposed by Councilman Magee. The budget can be balanced either by raising additional revenue—that is, by imposing fresh taxes—or by reducing expenditures. The latter is not only preferable from the taxpayers' standpoint but is the more practical alternative. The proposed survey would show how to do it.

We have Baltimore's experience to guide us, as the Western Pennsylvania Branch of the National Economy League has pointed out in a careful study of the work done by the "Commission on Efficiency and Economy" of the Maryland city. Baltimore, with a larger deficit than Pittsburgh's, succeeded last year not only in wiping out the deficit but in ending the year with a substantial surplus.

At the invitation of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, about a dozen of the larger business concerns each selected an executive, to serve, without compensation from the city, as a member of the commission. The commission represented about 25 per cent of the annual taxes paid to the city. It was assisted by 150 accountants, engineers and specialists, who served without cost to the city.

The business executives who compose the Balti- more commission had a strong incentive to reduce expenses; but they were men of the type who demand first-class service. By the application of business methods they succeeded in giving the city both benefits. They have proved that business principles are applicable to municipal management, also that city employes are not so politically minded that they cannot adapt themselves to the methods of commercial concerns.

We have Mayor McNair to thank for the exposure of one leak through which Pittsburghers' contributions to the ty treasury are draining away. The Mayor overheard two ty detectives expressing envy of a fellow detective who is on ity in Miami. Investigation disclosed that the Police Bureau nad loaned the services of this officer to Miami, but that the taxpayers of Pittsburgh were continuing to pay his salary. The detective has been in Miami since December 1.

To make Pittsburghers pay for police service in Miami is inexcusable, and we hope Mayor McNair will promptly put a stop to it. He learned of this matter more or less by accident. We would like to know how many more such leaks there are. The efficiency and economy survey advocated by Magee would furnish the information. We have little doubt that it not only would permit the saving of a large amount of money but would actually improve the municipal service.

Conditions in Pittsburgh are creating strong senti- ment in favor of the city manager form of government. In the boroughs and townships, too, there is demand for more efficient and businesslike management. This is bound to find expression at the next session of the Legislature. The call for abolition of second-class townships and consolidation of school districts and other minor administrative units is becoming too loud to be ignored.

The Pennsylvania Chamber of Commerce showed the trend of public opinion at its convention in Harrisburg this week when it recommended that the next Governor, whoever he may be, appoint a commission to frame legislation for economy in local government. But this will not be sufficient. The constitution will have to be revised to make the changes that are necessary if our governmental system is to be modernized.

An official of the Parmelee System, which oper- ates the taxicabs in Pittsburgh, admitted at a hearing before the Public Service Commission that its cabs did "too much" cruising downtown and contributed to traffic congestion. Cruising is expensive and unlawful. Having admitted its guilt in this matter, the Parmelee people will be expected to put a prompt end to the objectionable practice.

Cruising by the Parmelee cabs is particularly rep- rehensible because Parmelee officials promised at Public Service Commission hearings three years ago, in opposing the Hiland Taxicab Company's application for a certificate of public convenience, that if left in possession of the cab monopoly here cruising would end. As Walter Laird put it, "unit operation" would remove the reason for cruising, as each driver would make more trips than under the old system.

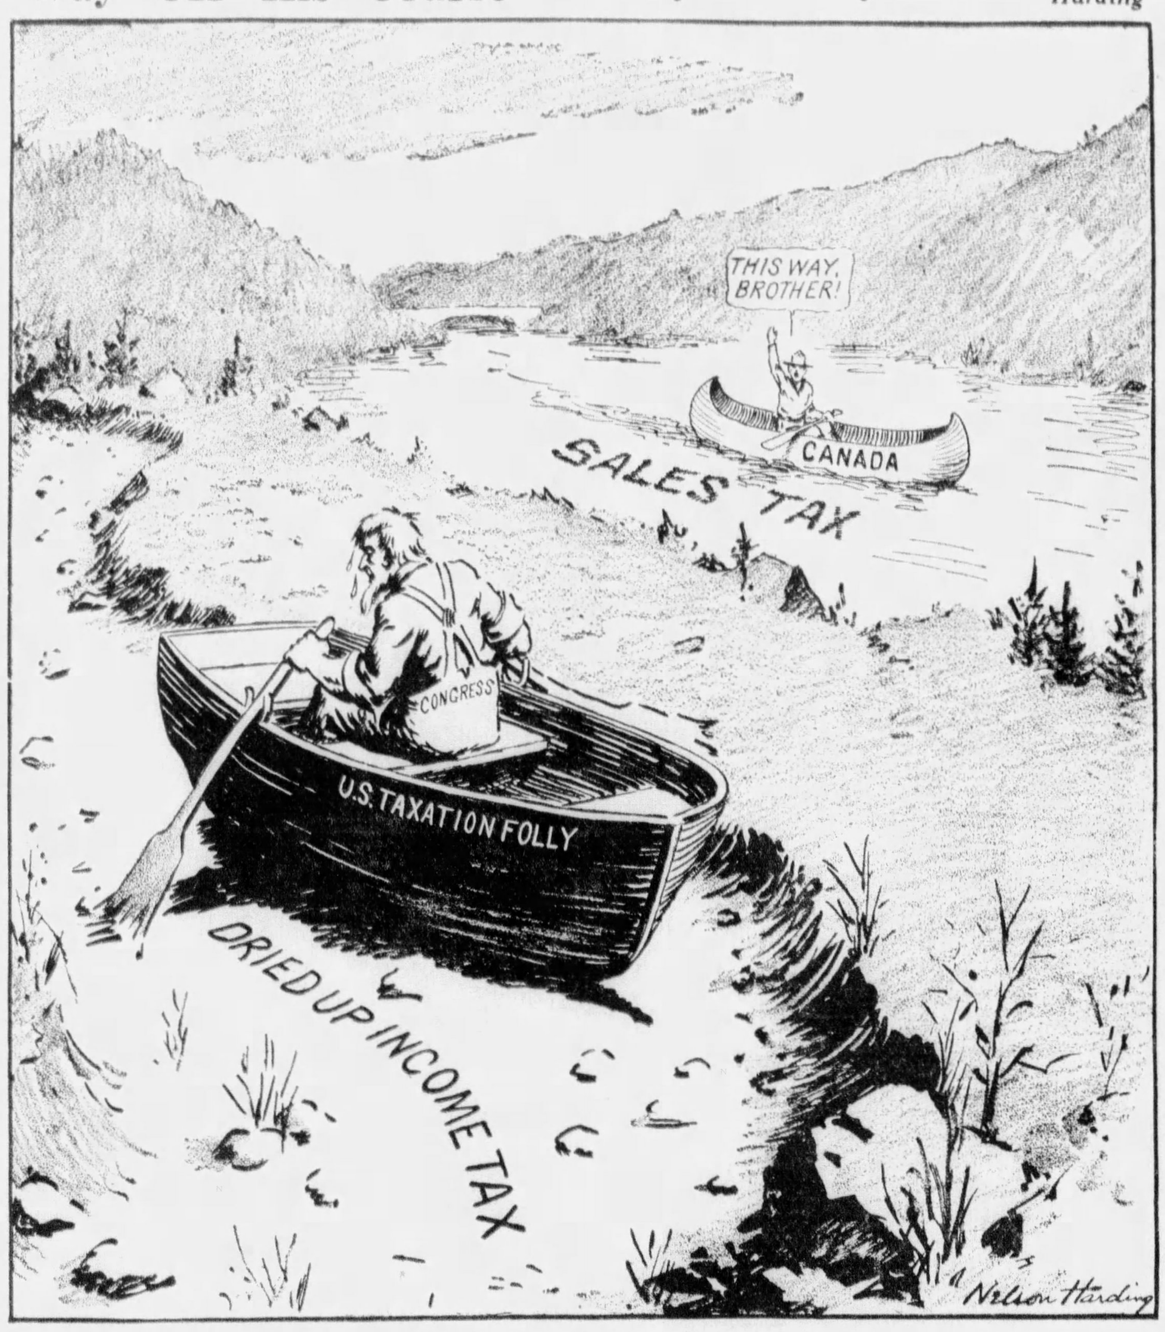
The state liquor stores are coming in for more or less criticism, much of it on petty grounds, and much of it unjustified. Organized in a great hurry, they have been in business only a little more than a month, yet already, in our opinion, they have produced a great improvement in conditions. In support of this opinion we point to the report of Supt. of Police Ben R. Marshall that arrests for drunkenness have shown a marked decrease since the first of the year. He suggests that people are now drinking temperately at home instead of intemperately in speakeasies.

If you enjoy a good laugh, you will find a treat in the article, "Your Laugh Betrays Your Character," in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. A laughing chimpanzee and a horse in a facial contortion which has been called "a horse laugh" are pictured, as well as some interesting people. The writer of the article explains the psychology of laughter.

But, of course, the place to look for laughs is in the 30 funnies—16 full size pages of them in four colors—in tomorrow's issue of Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. "Bringing Up Father," by McManus, "Tillie the Toiler," by Russ Westover, "Sentinel Louie," by O. Soglow, "Skippy," by Percy Crosby, "Boob McNutt," by Rube Goldberg, "and Mickey Mouse," by Walt Disney, are among the comics in Puck.

Way Off His Course

By Nelson Harding



How long will Uncle Sammy try
To navigate a stream long dry?
His oars are frayed, he's hard aground,
But will he ever look around

And notice that canoe afloat
On waters that will hold his boat?
Or hear the wise canoeist say:
"Here, brother, is the easy way!"

Fooling the Taxpayer

POLITICIANS frequently try to mislead the public into believing they get something for nothing out of governmental expenditures.

The demagogic idea that most people go scot free of taxes is based on misconception and error.

In ANY system of taxation, the BURDEN in the last analysis falls on the wealth-creating processes of the 45,000,000 persons NORMALLY GAINFULLY EMPLOYED.

The incidence of taxation is CAMOUFLAGED under the income tax setup.

ON THE other hand, there is no deception in connection with the general manufacturers' sales tax.

In advocating the general manufacturers' sales tax, the Hearst newspapers do not suggest it as an ADDITIONAL source of federal revenue to finance a needless riot of wasteful expenditures.

These newspapers suggest that the sales tax be SUBSTITUTED in part at least for vicious, incentive-destroying income taxes.

In the last fiscal year, the federal sales tax on small cigarets alone EXCEEDED THE PROCEEDS from either current CORPORATION income taxes or current INDIVIDUAL income taxes.

Total tax receipts from miscellaneous internal revenue, which is based mainly on selected sales taxes on certain articles, including tobacco, exceeded $858,000,000, compared with aggregate proceeds from current and back income taxes on individuals and corporations of $746,000,000.

IN THE current period, the comparison will become even more striking as a result of the beer and liquor taxes, which are essentially SALES taxes.

In other words, in spite of the political camouflage about soaking the rich under the existing obnoxious setup, the burdensome income taxes, about which there has been so much ballyhoo, have been less productive of revenue than variants of the sales tax.

A GENERAL sales tax, spread thin, can be more readily borne by business than special discriminatory sales taxes, spread thick. Even so, these partial excise taxes have proved the main reliance of the federal government during the period of depression.

THE GENERAL manufacturers' sales tax in a comparatively painless manner, would produce a maximum of revenue without disturbing the channels of business and employment.

It would free the economic system of the poisonous effort of political demagogues to soak the efficient, the enterprising and the venturesome, on whom opportunities for FULL EMPLOYMENT OF LABOR AT HIGH WAGES DEPEND.

Tax revision must be based on willingness to apply economically sound principles to the business of running the government.

It is dangerous to permit political blunderers and fakers to block intelligent and scientific revision of our fiscal system.

Supreme Court Decision in Minnesota Mortgage Moratorium Law Shows a Liberal Spirit

By Edwin C. Hill

"THERE be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not: the way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid."

To which mysteries, in this modern day, might be added: the whims of a woman, the psychology of the average jury, and what the United States Supreme Court will decide in a given case.

But the spirit of liberalism which has swayed our high court in recent years rather removes it from the category of the unpredictable. It seems apparent, for example, that the Nine Sages of Washington, by majority, at least, are going to back up our President in his revolutionary and drastic efforts to bring back prosperity to the people as a whole—not to a few, but to the many. In voting five to four to uphold the Minnesota mortgage moratorium law, the Supreme Court, speaking with the voice of the Chief Justice, Charles Evans Hughes, voted five to four not merely to uphold a state law but to stand by the President's New Deal as long as the crisis justifies.

John Blaisdell of Minneapolis had a mortgage of $3,700 on his home. He couldn't pay it when due, and under the state law he didn't have to pay it when due. The case of John Blaisdell was the case of hundreds of thousands of farmers and small home owners, stunned by the depression. It was the first test of the New Deal in the high court, the first conflict, under the New Deal, of the natural rights of human beings against the vested rights of property.

The Supreme Court divided, as it has so often done on the gravest of issues, and especially those involving the struggle of liberalism against conservatism. The five who voted to uphold the Minnesota law, and inferentially the New Deal policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt, were Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, Justice Brandeis, Justice Stone, Justice Roberts and Justice Cardozo. The four who voted contrariwise were the court's pillars of conservatism, Justices Sutherland, Ven Devanter, McReynolds and Butler.

Opinion Written By Chief Justice

THE interesting fact is that the majority opinion, siding with the extreme liberalism of the era we are passing through, was written by none other than the gentleman who had been attacked high and low and across the land, and sometimes in the bitterest terms, on the theory that he was an upholder of the rights of property as against the rights of man. I refer to the chief justice himself, Charles Evans Hughes, probably the finest intellect in America today.

The chief justice, a New Yorker, a former candidate for President of the Republican party, twice Governor of the State of New York, and at odd times the legal representative of great corporations, found himself in a curious position. On his left were four associate justices voting for the liberal idea, for the human being against the strictly legal rights of property. On his right were four associates who were, in effect at least, supporting the legal rights of property against the adversity of the individual. Without hesitation Justice Hughes voted for the man as against the dollar.

It has fallen to him to examine and to interpret the Constitution as an instrument which must guide one hundred and twenty-five million Americans living in 1934 rather than a handful of millions living a century ago. He has acted with the courage and vision of the great John Marshall.

Almost Elected President

IT was only by one of the most curious twists of fate that he was prevented from becoming President of the United States on March 4, 1917. A series of mischances so angered the friends and supporters of Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, that, while California gave Johnson a majority of three hundred thousand for the Senate, it returned a majority of three thousand, six hundred against Hughes for President. The electoral vote of California went to Woodrow Wilson, and the history of this country and the world was altered to a degree known to no one except the Creator Himself.

But destiny operates in ways unfathomable, and it may even be that Judge Hughes was diverted from the presidency to serve greater ends. Without the firm support of a majority of the Supreme Court it is scarcely likely that the plans and purposes of Franklin D. Roosevelt should come to full flower.

It seems to be true, as Finley Peter Dunne's Mr. Dooley said to his friend Jawn Hennessey many years ago, "The Supreme Court follows the election returns." But if it is true, it is true in the sense that the United States Supreme Court of this day and age does actually take into consideration the expressed will of the people, as well as the rigid machinery of law, even of the fundamental law.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Purely personal piffle: Calvary is among the most beautiful words in the language. Despite all I can do, Bob Davis will call me "Hod." No midnight repast beats caviar on cold chicken dumplings. Everybody's else evening tie looks better than mine.

Bostonians have the greatest pride of all Americans in their city. Nobody gathers glamour like Edna Millay. Or looks more wistful than Kendall Lee Glaenzer. The tune affecting me most is "Song of India." Percy Crosby has done his best work since going on the water wagon five years ago.

Nothing provides more innocent fun than searching through a huge bon voyage basket. Lafcadio Hearn fascinates me as much as any figure in American literature. Gene Fowler and I traded letters for years but never met. Sudden thought: Every woman looks regal in a high fur collar.

Two men I'd like to get together to reminisce are Harry Leon Wilson and Booth Tarkington. I can't keep from giggling at Professor Piccard in the news reels.

* * *

Flagstaff, Ariz., from a train window is a movie version of a frontier town. Nothing inspires a reverential awe like rounding the Horseshoe Curve at sunset. A favorite New York Mayor—John Purroy Mitchel. Never knew anyone to be bored with Walter C. Kelly's Virginia Judge monologue. Or Chic Sale's version of the small town wise-cracker. He coined "wise-cracker" by the way.

* * *

Each January I read the Old Farmer's Almanac from kiver to kiver. Everybody enjoys studying French after 40, when it doesn't do much good. An unworthy twinge perhaps: But Thomas Edison did as much for humanity as Colonel Lindberg, yet was unfailingly courteous to newspaper and cameramen. The hardest column is one like this. Nothing is so stately as a swan. Unless it is Kathleen Norris walking down a theatre aisle. Watching a dog roll makes me itchy and when I write aimlessly on the pad it is "Sandusky."

* * *

A poor soul with a clouded mind has addressed meaningless letters to me for more than 10 years. Every man surrenders to exaggeration when discussing less affluent days. I have never passed Cooper Union without being accosted by a beggar. Over the years, in hit and miss fashion, Vincent Youmans has turned out the peachiest popular tunes. The livest wire among the resort city mayors is Harry Bachrach, of Atlantic City. There is no writer of any period to compare to Shakespeare.

* * *

Direct and alternating currents are Greek to me, and I once studied penmanship under Thaddeus Q. Hicklebangle. Which is one for the Dickensians. Prediction: Roxy will spring a surprise package in showdom by spring. When people ask my wife how in the world she came to marry me, she murmurs: "It was moonlight in Venice and I was young." And do I look silly! Life's greatest shock: Watching a roommate who thought I was asleep extract a bill from my trousers. The most romantic hotel lobby—the old St. Charles in New Orleans. I like the aroma of stables. The best acted and most sensational dramatic role of the season is Henry Hull in "Tobacco Road." Will someone tell Clifton Webb how to pronounce decadent in that "smart" revue?

* * *

The only time flowers ever thrilled me was landing in a field of poppies, flying from London to Calais. Too much kidding by smart alec playwrights of their betters—that snide travesty of Sinclair Lewis, for instance. One of New York's handsomest men is Walter Chalaire, ex-newspaperman who became a lawyer. About the first reporter to interview the Wrights in Dayton about flying experiments, I reported back "no story." The best stage dance director I ever saw was the stone-deaf Julian Mitchell.

* * *

My only literary ambition: To write a true autobiography revealing without reservations every secret of a human soul. It's on the way. The Casino is the only restaurant to go second rate and then come back I know about.

* * *

Deep wisdom from a philosophic friend: "Oblivion is far easier to understand than infinity. That's why so many believe death is extinction." I'd jail cowards who ride jumping horses to fatal spills. I like to take a mouthful of water and hail the new Mayor with a gargled: "La-g-g-gwar-r--rdia!"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Invite Doubt!

You have your own notions about life . . . about the way things should be done . . . about what's true and what isn't.

You cherish these notions. You wrap yourself into them as into a warm blanket. You get mad if anyone tries to strip them away from you. You want to Have Things Settled, so life will be safe and easy to understand.

And yet, somehow it isn't.

Life keeps right on pestering you—making you wonder—making you fear. You don't know what's the matter.

YOU, YOURSELF, ARE THE MATTER. YOU AND YOUR NOTIONS.

* * *

You have made a trap of your notions. That trap won't let you move. It won't let you think new thoughts or risk new experiments. Instead of making you comfortable your notions have made you a prisoner. You feel, miserably, that you are missing most of the Big Show. And you are!

If you want to live, keep yourself free from notions. Keep yourself moving! Keep yourself open to new ideas. Be ready to consider . . . be ready to doubt . . . be ready to discard old view points and accept new ones.

"INVITE DOUBT."

Krishnamurti speaks of that in a little book called "LIFE THE GOAL."

* * *

"Invite doubt. Examine all your beliefs. All your theories, all your knowledge by inviting doubt . . . doubt is essential for the discovering and the understanding of the truth. If you merely accept without doubt its cruelty of examination, then what you have is not real . . . if your knowledge has not withstood the cruelty of doubt that knowledge will be of no value . . . Most people are afraid of doubt, think that it is a crime, a sin; they put doubt away from their minds, and hence grow strong in their narrowness, in their pettiness . . . in their shelters which breed decay and comfort. Whereas, if you invite doubt into your heart and into your mind, if you pursue that doubt logically into all the corridors, avenues, and shades of the mind and heart, and relentlessly scrutinize and examine all things, then what remains will be of your own knowledge . . ."

* * *

Invite doubt! Do not accept any fact or tradition until you have tested it by all the wisdom you possess and made it your own. Then, having made it your own, be just as willing to doubt once more and discard the old belief if a new and better truth presents itself. For that is the only way that you can keep on growing.

If the body did not change its tissues it would die very quickly. If the mind does not change its tissues it dies even more quickly. DOUBT IS THE GREAT CLEANSER . . . THE GREAT REJUVENATOR.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Single Aim

How godlike is that man in whom
One purpose reigns supreme,
That man who lets no circumstance
Turn him from deed or dream!

Attained or unattained, his goal
Is still his victory,
For that high purpose which he guards
Molds him to majesty.

He is the rock about whose foot
Unheeded currents swirl,
And past whose lofty, unvexed heights
Wild winds of being whirl.

No little frets or stings of life
Can touch or stain his days,
Who goes with eyes on one great light
Whose glory floods his ways.

How godlike is that man whose heart
One splendid purpose holds,
Increasing power year by year
Within his breast unfolds!

ISN'T IT SO?

The struggle for existence is the most interesting part of existing.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You expect too much in favors from the members of your lodges or your church societies.

You are a bit displeased when they don't get you a job.

You are peeved when they fail to indorse your note.

You think they should loan you money when you ask for it.

In many ways you ask favors on the basis of friendship, without security, of course, and there is no particular reason why any person should take up your financial difficulties merely because of your club or lodge membership, is there?

Too many men join lodges and other clubs expecting to receive aid in one way or another.

Too many members should never have been allowed to enter the portals as members because they are mischief makers and think only of self.

Clubs and lodges are supposed to stand in fraternal grounds of helpfulness to others; chiselers should have no place in the membership.

For this reason greater care should be observed in determining the character of those whose names are proposed for membership.
